Health officials urge students to help prevent meningitis with vaccine

By Adam Groff

College-bound Andoverites may want to consider a quick trip to the town Health Department before shipping off. Responding to government recommendations and increased public awareness about a dangerous form of meningitis, Andover health officials are offering a meningitis vaccine to residents.

"In the last couple years, there's been quite a few more cases of meningitis among college students," said Public Health Nurse Joanne Martel. "What's happening is when you get into those close quarters, and there are college-type activities like sharing drinks or food and getting boyfriends and girlfriends, there's increased chance for exposure."

Meningitis, an inflammation of the membranes surrounding the brain and the spinal cord, can be either viral or bacterial in origin. The viral form is normally not severe, but bacterial meningitis can be very severe or even fatal. The form of meningitis causing concern in recent years is caused by the meningococcus bacteria, and is spread through person-to-person contact, especially the exchange of saliva. According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, approximately 3,000 cases of meningococcal disease are recorded each year

Because meningitis spreads in settings such as college dormitories, Andover health officials are encouraging students to get a $70 shot before packing off to college. Resident Matthew Munson will begin school at Endicott College this fall.

FIRE & DICE

What are the odds your hydrant is broken?
Hydrants have failed at fires; town checking

By Rebecca Piro

Maureen Zonghetti wonders whether things would have been different if the two hydrants closest to her burning house had worked when firefighters needed them.

One hydrant by her home was completely missing when firefighters tried to quell the flames at her Greenwood Road home last May. A second hydrant nearby opened only after firefighters lost precious time struggling to unscrew a bolt that held back the water.

"I don't know if things would have been better or not," if the hydrants had been in good working order, she says.

Zonghetti's fire was the second time that month that firefighters were faced with the challenge of dousing flames without the use of the nearest hydrant.

Web question

How are the fire hydrants in your neighborhood? Do they function?

Last week's Townsmen Web-site question was: Would you consider expanding all-day kindergarten in Andover schools?

Out of 42 respondents:

► 18 people, or 43 percent, said, "Yes, major studies point to its value for students, and schools nationwide are moving in that direction."

► 3 people, or 7 percent, said, "Yes, as a practical matter it will address more of my need for child-care during the day."

► 8 people, or 19 percent, said, "No, it may be a good idea, but the system cannot afford it."

► 13 people, or 31 percent, said, "No, I prefer to be at home with my 5- or 6-year-old for part of the day rather than rush him or her into full-length school days."

This week's question: The town is currently conducting its first-ever town-wide hydrant inspection. Water-department employees found at least 14 damaged hydrants and 200 that need upgrades. How concerned does this make you about fire safety in your neighborhood?

• Very concerned. What if the hydrant next to my house doesn't work in an emergency?

• Concerned. Checking and maintaining fire hydrants should have been a priority for the town all along.

• Not very concerned. The town has approximately 8,000 hydrants.

• Not concerned at all. Fire trucks are equipped with plenty of water. The hydrants are also spaced no more than 600 feet apart, so if one breaks, firefighters can try the hydrant next to it.

• Other. (Use comments section.)

IN BRIEF

Sewer construction for new schools begins

Work on the sewer line that will service Andover's two new schools has begun.

Workers broke ground Monday in a state-protected eagle habitat off the road behind Agilent Technologies, says Jack Petkus, public works director. Workers must complete the piping in that area by Oct. 15, when the area becomes off-limits due to the animal habitat. At that point, workers will begin digging up the streets around the new schools.

"(Until then), people won't even know the construction is going on," Petkus says.

The first sewer contract, the Foster's Pond area in Ballardvale, is moving along as planned. "If anything, we're maybe even a little bit ahead of schedule," says Petkus. "We're pretty much done with the first contract. It's looking real good."

Many residents in that area can anticipate hooking up to the new sewers by October or November of this year, he says. DPW will send out letters to those residents as sewer becomes available. As incentive, the selectmen are also considering whether to wave the $200 hook-up fee for residents willing to connect within the next year or two, Petkus says. Having a sewer connection to a home almost always raises the home's value, he adds.

Title V seminar planned

A meeting is planned for homeowners wishing to obtain updated information about the inspection procedures regarding Title V requirements for septic-system inspections.

The first meeting is Thursday, Aug. 30 at 7 p.m. at the Salem Access TV conference room, 285 Derby St., Salem, Mass.

This 90-minute class costs $10 per family and is run by Dan Tremblay, a Massachusetts-licensed health agent. Inspection procedures, costs, tax credits, and information about how to obtain a certificate of compliance will be discussed.

Call Tremblay at 978-777-2711 to register.

Town gets $21K to bolster recycling

By Kristen Munson

The Clean Environment Fund has awarded Andover a $20,955 grant for participating in the 2001 Municipal Recycling Incentive Program.

James Curtis, chairman of the Andover Committee of Recycling, says that the town is using the grant to buy recycling bins and home composting units.

The executive office of Environmental Affairs and the Department of Environmental Protection will send the town payment every six months based upon its recycling performance and biannual review.

The grant was designed to reduce the cost of waste disposal and to improve recycling efforts. "This grant is crucial to helping Andover with the costs of maintaining the high environmental standards we expect," said Senator Sue Tucker, in a release.

Regional communities that participated in the incentive program and received the grant were Andover, Dracut, and Lawrence. Criteria these communities had to follow to qualify for the grant included: the continued effort to recycle and create greater access for residents, the increased collection of household waste, and the increased purchase of recycled products.

Curtis believes it was the expanded curbside collection program that garnered Andover the grant. The biweekly program collects cardboard, plastic, glass, and metals (including aluminum, steel, and tin). Residents' participation in the curbside collection ranges from 75 to 85 percent.

Other recycling programs residents may be less familiar with are the collection of household hazardous waste (HHW), and of electronic equipment. Three times per year the town collects computers, monitors, televisions, and other electronics for proper disposal, and twice annually there's a collection of household hazardous waste.

The next HHW collection date is set for Sept. 22, and recyclable items include: pool chemicals, bleach, pesticides, oil-based paints, batteries, thermometers, fluorescent light bulbs and any other materials containing mercury.

Variety of new teachers

The School Committee last week reviewed the list of new hires for the coming year, which included 51 new teachers (some of them permanent substitutes for those on a leave of absence). Superintendent Claudia Bach said that most of the new hires are to fill existing positions left vacant by teachers who have retired.

A few interesting statistics: 15 of these new teachers live in town; one attended Harvard Divinity School; one attended Maria Assumption Training College in Ireland; one went to Calcutta University; one went to the University of Phoenix; one to the University of Wisconsin; almost half hold a degree or certificate from either Boston University, Salem State College, Simmons College, UMass Amherst or Lowell, or the University of New Hampshire; the greatest number, seven, attended or are attending Lesley College.

Class sizes

Based on current projections, the smallest classes will be in kindergarten at West Elementary (the largest elementary school), with an average class size of 14.25 students in four sections. The largest classes can be expected in sixth grade at West Middle, where nine sections will have an average of 26.67 students each. Overall, projections show that there will be 2,656 elementary-school students, 1,529 middle-school students, and 1,644 high-school students in Andover schools.

Water department is making checks

BROKEN HYDRANTS

Two weeks earlier, fire trucks had raced to a barn on South Main Street that was consumed by fire – only to find that the two nearest hydrants were broken. Again, firefighters were forced to connect to another hydrant further away.

"We were very close to having a real problem," Fire Chief Chuck Murnane had said.

Murnane says those four hydrants are now fixed. But since the Greenwood Road fire, the water department has found 10 more broken hydrants in its first-ever town-wide inspection sweep, says Jack Petkus, public works director. Approximately 200 more of the town's 8,000 hydrants need upgrades, adds Murnane.

"Why haven't (inspections) been done on a regular basis? I don't know. That's a good question," says Dep. James Lynch, assistant fire chief to Murnane, who was on vacation this week.

Public Works employees for North Andover and Methuen confirmed that their respective communities perform routine hydrant maintenance and inspections. The Townsman could not reach employees from Lawrence and Haverhill Tuesday.

"In years gone by, there's been very little maintenance on (the hydrants)," says Petkus. He says he doesn't know why annual hydrant inspections were never a priority, but that his department took the initiative to begin inspections about one year ago. Workers now open each hydrant, check to ensure they are functional and grease the parts. The inspections will be an ongoing program, says Petkus. "By the time you've finished, you're back to where you began. But it's something that has to be done."

Indeed, if the four aforementioned hydrants had been previously inspected, could the town have avoided the problems on Greenwood Road and South Main Street?

"Time is of the essence when a fire is burning," says Lynch. "That's why we're on duty 24 hours a day. The growth of a fire is phenomenal in the course of minutes. When a truck pulls up and sees (a broken hydrant), we don't waste our time with it."

Normally, the water and fire departments mark broken hydrants by placing a bag over them or tacking on a warning sign to notify firefighters, says Lynch. The fire department also keeps a list of broken hydrants at the station. So why weren't those four hydrants marked or on the list?

"It's probably because no one was aware they were broken," says

Lynch.

Most hydrants are damaged during winter when snowplows hit them or water inside freezes and breaks the pipes, says Petkus. There is only one company that makes replacement parts for the hydrants that weigh more than 1,000 pounds. DPW does not store parts for many hydrants because Andover has a "hodgepodge" of different models and ages of hydrants, Petkus adds. But he says the situation is not cause for alarm.

"If you had the only fire hydrant within miles, it would be serious," Petkus says. "But the fire hydrants are spaced no more than 600 feet apart."

The bigger problem is that residents do not shovel out snow from around their hydrants during the winter, he says. "If you're talking about seconds that count, (firefighters) need to know where the (hydrant) is. That's worse than having one that's broken – knowing there's one that's out there and you can't find it."

Petkus says 99 percent of the residents in town did not shovel out their hydrants this winter, even after DPW workers appealed to them repeatedly.

In the unlikely event that the hydrant in front of someone's house does not work, firefighters usually can put out a fire with the 750 gallons of water each fire truck carries inside, says Lynch. If firefighters need more than that, the 1,000 feet of hose on every truck will easily reach to the next hydrant on the street – or the next.

"We have our pick," Lynch says.

Bird totals grow, but West Nile still not found in mosquitos

By Adam Groff

The spread of West Nile virus among birds in Andover and the rest of the state continues, but officials are still not worried. They continue, however, to be perplexed as to why the virus has not yet been detected in mosquitos.

From last Wednesday to this Tuesday, the number of dead birds from Andover testing positive for West Nile has risen from seven to 12, still the second-highest number in the state; the number of birds in state-leader Tewksbury has gone from 12 to 25. As of Tuesday, 128 dead birds statewide had tested positive.

"This has no impact on our mosquito-control plan," said Health Director Everett Penney on Tuesday. So far, preventive measures in Andover and the rest of the Northeast Mosquito Control District, which the town joined last year, have been confined to distributing larvicide pellets in area catch basins and encouraging people to remove sources of standing water on their properties, such as buckets or clogged gutters. Officials have stressed that home prevention is important, because the species of mosquito that can carry the virus to humans prefers to breed in artificial containers and polluted water, rather than in natural areas like swamps.

"The thing we don't understand," said Penney, "and people at the state level don't understand it either, is why we're getting the virus in birds but not in mosquitos."

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, mosquitos testing positive for the virus have been found in Rhode Island and Connecticut this year.

In accordance with procedural guidelines established by the state, spraying to kill adult mosquitos in a community will not be undertaken until the insects, pools of which are tested daily around the state, begin to test positive. Until mosquitos carrying the virus are detected, the risk of humans catching it is considered insignificant. But if positive mosquitos are found, spraying will be undertaken only following consultations among the town, the mosquito-control district, and the state.

On Tuesday night, the East Middlesex Mosquito Control Project began spraying to control mosquitos in an area of southwestern North Reading, but project superintendent David Henley said on Tuesday that the measure was not being undertaken in response to the threat of West Nile virus, but simply because there are a lot of mosquitos in North Reading. He said that about one quarter of the town is wetlands, and mosquitos are more of a problem there than in some other communities. North Reading has had no birds test positive for West Nile virus this year.

Penney suggested that if mosquitos don't start testing positive soon, the threat may pass when the weather starts getting cooler.

"I think what we expect to see is for it to keep increasing in the bird population, and for it to start showing up in the mosquito population," he said. "If we don't see it for another four weeks, we'll be at the end of September when it's getting cooler, and there will be a very small chance of it spreading further after that."

He said that mosquitos breed more slowly in cool weather, and the first frost will kill many of them off.

National developments

The nation's first fatality this year from West Nile virus, which can cause a form of encephalitis, or swelling of the brain, was confirmed on Friday, when a 71-year-old woman in Georgia died from it. Three other human cases, two in Florida and one in New York, have been recorded so far this year. Two people died from it last year, and the virus killed seven people in

New York in 1999, the year the virus first appeared in this hemisphere. Last week, a bird in Canada tested positive for the virus, representing its first-ever appearance in that country.

West Nile virus is not fatal to most people, who may suffer headaches or flulike symptoms if infected with it. However, the very young, the elderly, and people with weakened immune systems are at greater risk. All the people in this country who have died from the virus were older than 70.

The state Department of Public Health maintains a West Nile virus information Web site, which includes daily updates on town and state data at <www.state.ma.us/dph/wnv/wnvl.htm>.

WEST NILE VIRUS-INFECTED BIRDS FOUND IN ANDOVER

Health department: $70 vaccine can help prevent meningitis

■ MENINGITIS

in the United States, and from 10 to 13 percent of these are fatal. Another 10 percent result in brain damage, loss of hearing, or loss of limbs.

Merrimack Valley residents may be aware of the disease through the plight of Kayla St. Pierre, the Lawrence girl who contracted bacterial meningitis last year at the age of 12 and survived, but lost both her legs and most of her fingers. Area residents donated a total of $114,000 to help her.

"More than anything, that was the case that was in the paper, and everyone saw the effects," said Gerald Dugal, Director of the Hamil Health Center at Merrimack College. This June, for the third year, the college sent letters home to students' parents, informing them about the disease and recommending they consider vaccination.

"The incidence rate is really quite small, but the effects can be so devastating," said Dugal. He said that studies have shown about three out of every 100,000 college dormitory students each year get the disease, which initially causes flulike symptoms and a stiff neck; these symptoms, however, can be followed very rapidly by dangerous complications such as seizures or coma if the disease is not detected quickly. Nerve endings can begin to die, which is what sometimes results in loss of limb.

"We go by the American College Health Association guidelines," said Dugal. "It's not a requirement, but their guideline is that vaccination is recommended for college freshmen living in dormitories or residence halls. Last year about half of our incoming residents took that option." He said that students and parents are encouraged to talk to their family physicians and, if they choose, get the meningococcal vaccine, Menomune, at home. Alternative-

"There's been quite a few more cases of meningitis among college students... (The vaccine) is not a cure-all, but it's something. It's a single shot, and it can prevent a serious disease."

PUBLIC HEALTH NURSE

ly, parents can have their physicians fax a prescription to a pharmacy in North Andover, and the vaccine can be administered at the Hamil Health Center.

Martel said the Andover Health Department is offering the vaccine, at a cost of $70, because not all health insurers cover it, and therefore some physicians do not offer it in their offices. She said the health department charge for the vaccination is lower than some providers, which can charge $85 or more. The CDC's Advisory Council on Immunization Practices, as well as the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, have both also recommended to health-care providers that information about meningitis and the meningococcal vaccine be made readily available to college-age students and their parents.

According to Dugal, one study reported 308 cases of bacterial meningitis in 1991 among young adults in the United States aged 15 to 24, and 600 in 1997. According to an Associated Press article on Monday, a girl in North Adams died last weekend from what doctors believe may be bacterial meningitis; also, a postal worker from Randolph died from a non-contagious form of the disease last month, and in April, a student at Northeastern University was diagnosed with it, and six fellow students were treated as well.

According to Martel, Meno-mune only provides immunity for about three or four years – long enough to last through college – and against only a few strains of meningitis-causing bacteria. But it still may be a sound investment, she said.

"There are four strains that we're concerned with, and the vaccine covers three of them," she said. "It's not a cure-all, but it's something. It's single shot, and it can prevent a serious disease."

The Health Department is administering the vaccine by appointment only. To arrange one, or to ask questions, call the public health nurse at 978-623-8295.

Transportation

Regional commission eyes slow 5-year change

Four Andover projects are included on a list of transportation improvements recently compiled by the Merrimack Valley Planning Commission.

The 2002-2007 Transportation Improvement Program is a conceptual master plan of project initiatives that spans six years, says MVPC Chairman Steve Colyer.

Projects tentatively planned for Andover include repairs to the North Main Street bridge that runs over the MBTA train tracks, says Colyer. The state would fund the $1.5 million cost.

The MVPC list also includes the Main Street corridor improvements, which are currently undergoing review by the state and a local committee of volunteers. The state will contribute $2.5 million to the project.

Traffic signals for five Andover intersections on Route 125 are still in the works. The project proposes installing traffic lights where Route 125 intersects with Wildwood Road, Salem Street, Prospect Road, Hillside Road and Vine Street, he says. Funding for the project is not yet definite.

A $3 million extension of Andover Street and Burt Road is the last of Andover projects on the list. The extension would relieve some of the traffic congestion on Ballardvale Street and provide better public access into the Lowell Junction Road area, says Colyer.

According to the list, a tentative date for the beginning of construction on the bridge is fiscal year 2003; fiscal year 2007 for the Main Street project; and fiscal year 2002 for the Burt Road extension. The dates are subject to change, says Colyer.

Several other transportation-related projects in other Merrimack Valley communities are included in the plan. Communities could spend a total of $170 million of state and federal funds implementing these projects over the next six years, according to a press release.

Interjections on intersection at High Plain Road

By Rebecca Piro

A new curb extension at the intersection of High Plain Road and Beacon Street has some residents driving mad.

Public works employees recently tightened up the intersection by narrowing the turning radius and replacing the yield sign at the end of High Plain with a stop sign, says Jack Petkus, DPW director.

Town officials and the police department agreed the change would reduce the fender-benders caused by cars merging onto Beacon Street without slowing or stopping, says Safety Officer Bob Cronin.

But as soon as DPW workers finished construction and took the orange cones away, complaint calls started coming in, says Petkus.

"I don't see what the problem is," he says. "People (were) flying out of High Plain without stopping, and people were getting wacked."

"People weren't obeying the yield sign," says Cronin, adding that one resident has called him to complain about the changes. "I think it will work. It's just going to take time."

The new curb is wide enough to fit the school buses that will need to get through come September, he adds. The intersection work is part of the installation of sidewalks leading to the new Cross Street schools, currently under construction.

Those sidewalks are not on the same side as the schools, but Petkus says that's no cause for alarm. "No matter what side you put it on, at least (some) of the kids will have to cross," depending what side of the street they live on, he says. Students will also have a crossing guard to guide them safely across at Beacon and High Plain.

THE RISK OF ORAL CANCER

Last year, 30,000 new cases of oral cancer, the sixth most common malignancy in the world, were diagnosed, and 8,000 people died of the disease. All of these cases could have been prevented with certain lifestyle measures. By shunning tobacco use, cutting back on excessive alcohol consumption, and avoiding overexposure to sunlight, we can reduce our risk of oral cancer. In addition, regular visits to the dentist increase the likelihood of early detection, so that treatment can begin at an early, potentially curable stage. In a recent survey of adults aged forty years and older, only 14% of those polled indicated that they had ever been examined for oral cancer. Early detection and treatment of oral cancer significantly improves prognosis.

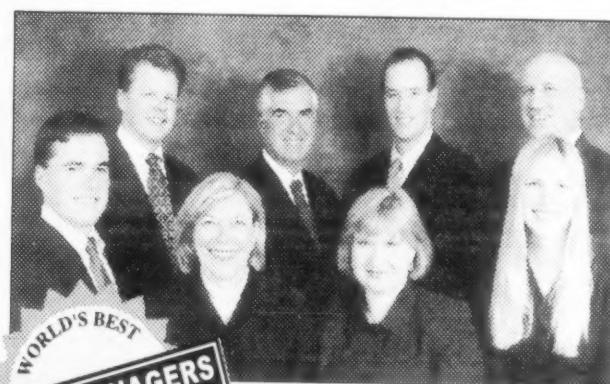

Your total health is always our concern. That's why all new patient exams are so thorough - so we can establish a baseline against which we can measure your future dental profile and progress. And regular professional checkups make it possible for us to watch for developing concerns and address them while they are small, before they can turn into something more serious. We offer gentle, family dental care at 296 Lowell Street, Rt 133, with easy access off Rt 93. Please call 978-475-2431.

P.S. Oral cancers can develop anywhere within the oral cavity, including on the lips, the lining of the cheeks, the gums, the tongue, and the palate.

Town needs plans of attack for health, for life

ANDOVER HEALTH officials should be praised for taking to heart the old cliché, there's nothing more important than your health. The health department and Board of Health have been addressing proactively issues that could turn into serious health problems for some Andover residents.

Reacting to West Nile virus concerns, Andover has sent more birds to the state labs for testing than perhaps any other community in the state. The virus has not yet been found in local mosquitos – which could transfer the virus to humans – but should it be, residents can take comfort in the fact that Andover is so closely monitoring the situation.

Noting that Andover's college-age residents are more likely to contract meningitis than most people, because they live in a dormitory setting, town health officials have sprung into action on that front, too. Because not every doctor's office offers a vaccine, the town is offering one, and at a lower price than many doctors do.

The town's fire and police departments must continue to use this type of proactive policy when it comes to ensuring that residents' fire hydrants are in good working order. Firefighters responding to fires this year have not only found broken hydrants, but hydrants that were missing completely. According to the town's public works director, Andover has only recently begun checking the condition of its fire hydrants on a routine basis.

Officials must continue such checks and maintenance of basic safety equipment. Like a vaccine, a hydrant can save lives – providing, of course, that it can function.

Elementary recess: The salad days

for as long as possible. Everyone else tried to kill him and get the ball for themselves. To my knowledge – and now amazement – no one ever died. In fact, we loved muckle.

The key, however, was to get enough field space to play the game. So, the first boy to finish eating lunch would run outside and "claim the field" on the playground for himself and the other muckle enthusiasts in his grade.

Eating lunch at lunchtime was a secondary pursuit, as far as I can remember.

When kids actually took an interest in eating, it was usually because of the snacks or, on Fridays, the pizza available.

I can still remember the day a friend of mine moved to town. There was great interest in him that day. This was not because he was new, but because his family didn't have a stocked kitchen yet, and he had brought a Big Mac for lunch. He will probably spend the rest of his life trying to be that cool again.

I was thinking about that this week, because, in an effort to respond to parents concerned about school nutrition, the school system has changed lunch. For those who missed it while they were on a summer vacation, in response to PTO requests, South Elementary School will try serving more healthful food than usual during the first month of school.

The difference will be noticeable – and as a result, will probably prove the system's contention that it serves what it does because that is what kids are most likely to eat.

There will be a fruit and salad bar available every day. There will be far fewer snack chips. And tacos will be on honey/wheat tortillas.

While many kids at other elementary schools will be eating cheeseburgers and fries during the first day of school, many kids at South will be having chicken stir fry with brown rice. An acceptance of this differently colored rice by the pre-teen crowd will likely shock cafeteria workers everywhere.

On Wednesday, Sept. 12, kids at other elementary schools will be having two tacos, possibly with a side of mozzarella sticks. The kids at South will have a tuna sandwich with low-fat mayonnaise. On wheat bread. With soup.

Alternatively, they could have a turkey hot dog.

The question now is: will anybody eat this stuff? Or, perhaps, will most kids eat enough to even notice the change?

Chances are that kids won't be happy with the low-fat alternatives and the lack of snack chips and traditional ice-cream products.

Recess, however, will remain intact. So, if kids today are the same as they were 20 years ago, no matter what's put on their lunch trays, they'll all live.

Assuming, of course, that no one plays muckle anymore.

Housing development

Town can't let AvalonBay take advantage of law

Editor, Townsman:

When the state legislature passed the 40B regulations in 1969, its intention was to help low- and middle-income families obtain affordable housing. The spirit of this legislation was readily embraced by Andover, as evidenced by its relative achievement at complying with the targets established. Andover ranks in the top 10 percent of communities statewide for the percentage of affordable housing available to families, and is currently cited by the state's Department of Housing and Community Development as a community that made great progress toward the state's affordable-housing goals.

The 40B law was originally designed to help non-profit organizations, government agencies and limited dividend corporations build affordable housing. Something quite unexpected happened along the way, however. Developers discovered that 40B was a dream law. They learned how to reap huge profits by manipulating the regulations to build high-priced, high-density apartment complexes wherever they wished. Communities like Andover with good schools and safe neighborhoods became ideal targets. The developers found they could not only bypass every single community zoning law, they could obtain state funding to do so. This developers' dream law has become a nightmare for citizens around the state who are now battling multi-billion-dollar corporations determined to make a profit at any cost to their communities.

Sound Kafkaesque? One of the most egregious examples in the state is right here in Andover - AvalonBay's application to develop the St. Clare Monastery site on River Road. Right behind this application are several other 40B applications by developers looking to exploit the community. With the exception of the application at Ballardvale Crossing, these applications have nothing to do with providing affordable housing.

The facts are indisputable. AvalonBay is seeking relief from nearly every one of the town's zoning laws to build 136 apartments on nine acres of pristine greenspace that includes known wetlands and a corridor for wildlife movement adjacent to woods that are teeming with wildlife. This apartment density is three times that of Brookside Estates, a comparable development that warrants its own police substation. Andover's town planner opposes this development. A request by the nuns at St. Clare to build an assisted-living facility on this site was previously turned down due to its remote location and the difficulty in providing emergency and other services. There is no sewer agreement in place. The town's Conservation Commission has only just recently begun to consider the environmental aspects of this application and will need months to complete their work. Disconcertingly, residents at other AvalonBay developments in Massachusetts report crime, bad management and double-digit rent increases. The coup de grace is that the average cost of rental housing in Andover will increase if these apartments are built.

Despite all of that, the ZBA has been pressured by the developer to act quickly and is set to cut off public input this Monday so they can rule on the application. After numerous meetings, serious issues remain regarding schools, traffic, conservation, housing density and emergency services. The projected taxes from this development do not begin to cover the cost of the additional services, classrooms and traffic control that will be needed due to the sudden influx of an estimated 345 new residents. Andover taxpayers will be forced to pay more for these services or suffer a decline in community standards with respect to education and safety. The ZBA contends that this cost to Andover is not relevant to their decision given the requirements of 40B. In reality, it does matter because these revenues are critical to an intelligent plan for growth. There is substantial precedence at the state level to support a rejection of this application by the ZBA given Andover's compliance record to date and its well considered blueprint for providing more affordable housing.

Communities have zoning laws for a reason. They are there to assure that growth is commensurate with community standards and available resources. Armed with Boston lawyers and bullying tactics, AvalonBay makes a potent adversary determined to circumvent Andover's zoning laws for its own gain. It sues towns when its applications are turned down. Let's hope the members on the ZBA have the courage to respect the wishes of their neighbors and reject AvalonBay's application. Let them know that you care by attending Monday night's meeting.

Once complete, the new middle and elementary schools will be filled with redistricted students next year.

Redistricting

Soon-to-be sixth-grader wants say in plan

Editor, Townsman:

I have just completed fifth grade at South Elementary School and will be attending Doherty Middle School in the fall. Last spring, I heard from my parents that I was part of a neighborhood that would be redistricted to West Middle School for my seventh-grade year. Unfortunately, I learned about this plan too late in the process, and I was unable to take part in the redistricting meetings. I did attend the school board meeting on May 8, the day that the board voted on the redistricting plans. I left the meeting surprised and confused that nobody mentioned the impact that the redistricting would have on the students themselves. While I heard thanks for the Redistricting Task Force, concern about parents' feelings about their children's placement and the number of students in each school, it seemed that there was little thought given to those most affected - the students.

As a young person who will be affected by the redistricting plans, I would like the opportunity to share my thoughts and express my feelings about the upcoming changes. I am nervous and scared about leaving my friends and the school that I will come to know for one year. I understand that change occurs in everyone's life, but I also know how difficult it is to build new friendships during the early teenage years. It has taken a few years to build the strong friendships I have now. I feel a strong sense of support and shared interests with my friends and will find it very hard to start over.

I have spent a lot of time thinking about solutions with my family and friends. For example, I've learned about "grandfathering," which would allow my entire class to remain at the middle school they began with for the entire three years. I have also thought about beginning the redistricting process at an earlier age, for example in second or third grade when changes are a little easier.

I would like the opportunity to serve on any committees that might be created to discuss the redistricting procedure. With all the challenges that are ahead for the Andover schools it is important that the voice of those most affected is heard.

Current drug thieves may have hit Andover store in '99

Police work with pharmacy to 'keep the bad guys out,' as passion for the drug OxyContin intensifies

By Rebecca Piro

Shawn McKallagat remembers well the day two armed robbers burst into Letourneau's Pharmacy looking for OxyContin.

"It was a minute and a half; in and out, two guys with a gun, and they came in screaming for OxyContin. At first I thought it was a joke," he says.

Andover police have yet to arrest the two men responsible for the October 1999 robbery. But they say the game's not over yet. The latest robberies occurring throughout the Greater Boston area have a recurring theme similar to the 1999 raid in Andover — the suspects.

"The names that were popping up back then as suspects are popping up now," says Det. Don Pattullo.

Police throughout northeastern Massachusetts believe five men from Charlestown — including the two masked men who hit the Andover pharmacy — are responsible for about 20 new robberies since January. Those robberies happened in Burlington, Boston, Medford, Somerville, Arlington, Malden, Reading, Tewksbury, Lynnfield, Melrose and Woburn, says Pattullo. While more than one group is responsible for the recent rash of robberies, police believe these particular cases were carried out by the same suspects responsible for about 12 OxyContin robberies in 1999.

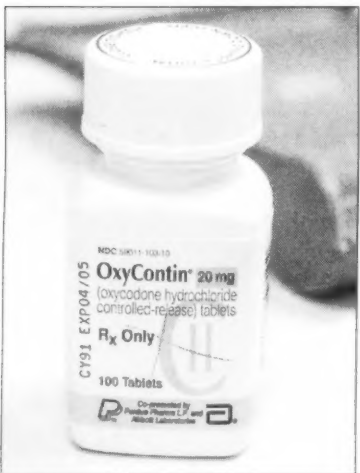

"The (motive) is the same, the descriptions are the same," he says. "Two or more guys... go in, they go right to the pharmacist, show a gun and demand OxyContin. They are only in the place 30 seconds to two minutes."

"It happens so quick you don't have time to be scared," remembers McKallagat, whose North Main Street store is seconds away from Interstate 495 — and what some robbers might see as an easy target with a fast escape route. Now McKallagat, other area pharmacists and police are taking steps to deter robbers, starting by posting bright yellow signs in the window telling potential thieves that there is only a limited supply of the drug inside.

"We're there at closing," says Pattullo. "(A police cruiser) will swing by and be out front. (Officers) on the midnight shifts are taking walk-throughs. We're being seen more frequently. Our officers have shotguns, (because) those guys doing robberies have been armed."

"We've upgraded our security cameras," says McKallagat. "All the employees have been counseled... to keep their eyes and ears open and pay attention to people coming into the store."

Letourneau's now closes at 6 p.m., an hour earlier than they used to, on advice of police. "We're very much aware of the risks," McKallagat adds.

Robbers seek OxyContin for two main reasons: first, the drug, meant to ease pain in cancer patients, offers a "euphoric high" to illegitimate users, says McKallagat. The drug also pulls in a large cash value. OxyContin goes for $1 per milligram on the street, says Pattullo. At that rate, one 80-milligram pill is worth $80. Most robbers get away with 2,000 or more pills during each raid, he adds.

"They hit here once and they know they got away with it," says Pattullo. He hopes that the steps police and pharmacists have taken will prove worthwhile in keeping "the bad guys out."

"So far it's worked," he says.

TRIBUTE TO A DYNAMIC PAIR OF BOYS

Friends of the Patels and Smiths turned out at Bancroft Elementary School on Tuesday to see the dedication of a mural to the late Yogan Patel and Ivan Smith, former Bancroft students.

At Bancroft, families' tears dried by mural's presence

By Judy Wakefield

An emotion-packed dedication service in honor of two former Bancroft School students brought tears and smiles to the faces of those who remembered Ivan Smith and Yogan Patel on Tuesday.

The ceremony lasted barely 15 minutes but many were overcome with emotion as teachers remembered the deceased boys. Nine-year-old violinist Alice Ahn, a Bancroft fourth-grader, played Ode to Joy, while the boys' parents and brothers wiped away tears.

Artist Betsy Wish of Andover worked with third-graders at Bancroft to come up with the treehouse mural idea that now adorns the entrance to the school's media center. The mural was officially dedicated at Tuesday's ceremony in honor of Yogan. It's a treehouse painting complemented by a white picket fence and park bench, which was dedicated in Ivan's memory. Both boys attended Bancroft.

"This is very emotional," said Joshna Patel, whose son died of cancer four years ago when he was a Bancroft fourth-grader. He would have turned 14 next Friday.

"But, at the same time, this is truly beautiful that the Bancroft community remembers our son," she said holding hands with her son, Nilesch Patel, 8.

"I am speechless," said Chinan Patel of the tribute before turning to the mural and smiling at the intricate details that truly reflect his son's life.

"Those signs painted on the tree house could be called the PC (politically correct) signs. Yogan's tree house had signs that said 'no girls,'" Patel said with a soft smile as he pointed to the "no grownups" sign on the mural.

Ivan's mother, Nancy Smith, was also overcome with emotion as she wiped away her tears and the tears shed by her son, Nick, who uses a wheelchair. Ivan's father, Rodney Smith, who is the town's accountant, also comforted Nick.

Ivan had just finished seventh grade at Doherty Middle School last year when he headed to Salisbury Beach for a summer day of fun in the sand with friends. Tragedy struck when a sand hole collapsed on him. Ivan died exactly one year ago yesterday, Aug. 22.

The Smiths were also grateful for the tribute and were eager to point out mural details that brought back happy memories of Ivan.

"See that white cat?" Nancy Smith asked, pointing to the mural, where a feline was painted sitting on top of a little girl's head. The little girl was smiling.

"That little girl reminds me of Ivan's friend and Ivan loved animals. In fact, his cat's ashes are buried with him," she said.

A few friends of both boys, who would have been entering high school this fall, were on hand and were pleased that their friends are forever remembered at Bancroft.

"It's nice that this tribute is in a happy place," said Jay Scully, 14, of Andover. "Yogan loved his books and Ivan liked to have fun. We had good times here."

When Yogan was too sick to eat in the Bancroft cafeteria, Jay often ate lunch with him in the hallway so he wouldn't be alone. said former Bancroft principal Norah McCarthy who knew both boys and their families.

"Yes, this is a very emotional time for the families and friends of these boys but it is also truly an endeavor of love," she said of the mural, which covers a 25-by-30-foot wall and required a cherry picker for the finishing touches. "These boys will always be in our hearts."

Thousands expected to flood housing office

Effort is just to get on the waiting list for affordable housing at the Andover Housing Authority

By Adam Groff

Anyone who has any doubts about the severity of the housing shortage in the region can call the Andover Housing Authority — if they can get through between now and Sept. 5.

"The phone has not stopped at our agency," said Executive Director Christine Metzemaekers on Tuesday, after the Housing Authority placed the first of two newspaper advertisements this past weekend.

Did some choice affordable housing units just become available in town? Hardly. The housing-voucher waiting list that the Housing Authority keeps on file is just getting shorter, and its officials have opened the list for the first time in three years in order to bulk it up again. To prevent a flood of warm bodies into the housing office on Morton Street, the advertisement itself is a preapplication that can be clipped, filled out with name, address and social security number, and mailed.

The ad will run for two Sundays in the Eagle-Tribune, as well as in El Puente, the Spanish-language paper, and for the next two weeks in the Townsmen. Metzemaekers expects to receive about 5,000 preapplications by the Sept. 5 deadline. After that, 300 names will be selected by lottery and then sent standard applications.

The people on the list are waiting to apply for federal Section 8 housing vouchers, for which people below a certain income level ($32,050 for a family of four, for example) are eligible. Holders of these vouchers can rent an apartment anywhere they can find one, and they pay the landlord 30 percent of their gross income for rent; the remainder is paid by the Housing Authority with funds distributed each year by the Department of Housing and Urban Development. HUD also decides how many housing vouchers a community gets; the Andover authority has 127. Although people can use them to live in any community in the country, Metzemaekers says the great majority stay in Andover. Also, the law permits housing authorities to give preference to people who live or work in town, as well as to the elderly or disabled, in assigning the vouchers.

"But even when they get one, it's very hard to find a place to live," said Metzemaekers. "There just isn't any place. There's a housing crisis."

Not only that, but the base amount of money that HUD allots the Andover authority each year, based on a yearly determination of "fair market rent" in an area, is often not enough to cover voucher recipients' rents in Andover.

"We are in the same (area) as the city of Lawrence, so we im-

SAFELY HOME

I am now at home in heaven;
All's so happy, all so bright!
There is perfect joy and beauty
In this everlasting light.
All the pain and grief are over,
Every restless tossing past;
I am now at peace forever,
Safely home in heaven at last.
Did you wonder I so calmly
Trod the Valley of the Shade?
Oh! but Jesus' love illumined
Every dark and fearful glade.
And he came Himself to meet me
In that way so hard to tread;
And with Jesus' arm to lean on,
Could I have one doubt or dread?
Then you must not grieve so sorely,
For I love you dearly still;
Try to look beyond earth's shadows,
Pray to trust our Father's will
There is work still waiting for you,
So you must not idle stand;
Do your work while life remaineth-
You shall rest in Jesus' land.
When that work is all completed,
He will gently call you home;
Oh, the rapture of the meeting!
Oh, the joy to see you come!

Before and after — Lauren Wilmarth, 10, became the latest resident to cut her hair so that a wig could be made for a child with a serious illness.

Giving of herself, her hair

By Devon O'Neal

As the scissors closed on her 10-inch long ponytail, 10-year-old Lauren Wilmarth closed her eyes tight. After deciding to donate her hair to the Locks of Love foundation based out of Palm Springs, Fla., the actual snip was a little bit scary.

"I was very nervous," she says, "but my hair was getting hard to handle, especially at swim practice."

After Lauren's close family friend Matt was diagnosed with a rare form of lymphoma, she decided that she wanted to do something to help others with cancer. So her mother, Mary Ann, went online to learn more about the Locks of Love organization.

"It costs about $3,000 for a family to purchase a wig for a child, (and) one of Matt's friends might get the hair as well," says Mary Ann Wilmarth.

Although it will take more than one child's hair to create a wig, Lauren's mane plays a very significant part. Because of her donation, a child with cancer will get the chance to have the hair that chemotherapy has taken away from him or her. "I was glad I could do it for them," says Lauren. "I might even do it (grow out her hair) again."

ALL THOSE YEARS AGO

10 YEARS AGO IN ANDOVER

Five persons were overcome by carbon dioxide after a cloud of the gas leaked from a storage tank at a bottled-gas company in Tewksbury just over the Andover line. All were treated at St. John's Hospital in Lowell and released. The liquid carbon dioxide leaked in vapor form from a storage tank at Liquid Carbonics Specialty Gas Corp., at 1635 Shawsheen Road, Tewksbury. The company sits about 500 yards from the Andover line. When firefighters arrived on the scene, they saw a car enveloped in a white cloud of gas that had settled across the street. The firefighters entered the cloud, found two more cars and carried four semiconscious occupants of the vehicles out of the cloud. All four were taken by ambulance to St. John's Hospital where they were treated and later released. The cloud looked like fog, and motorists apparently slowed down and drove through it as it settled in the roadway. The cloud became so thick that the motorists stopped and were overcome by the gas. The cars may have stalled because of the lack of oxygen caused by the gas, said Lt. Barrelle of Tewksbury Fire and Safety. "Carbon dioxide displaces oxygen," said Dewey Erzinger, a spokesperson at Liquid Carbonics' Chicago office. If a person were to remain in a concentrated cloud of the vapor he could suffocate, Mr. Erzinger said, but he added that "Normally, CO2 is a very friendly gas."

Phillips Academy Headmaster Donald McNemar, and his wife Britta, along with one-third of the PA staff, recently returned from a six-week study mission in China. The trip was funded by two Chinese-American alumni of the school to begin an academic exchange between PA and Harbin Institute of Technology in Beijing to foster understanding between cultures.

Judge John E. Fenton Jr., 60, of Andover, chief justice of the Massachusetts Land Court, has been named chief administrative justice for the Massachusetts Trial Court.

A fire in a 1,000-gallon antiperspirant storage tank at the Gillette Co. on Burtt Road, was extinguished by a fire-protection system at the plant, Deputy Fire Chief James Lynch said Wednesday morning. Employees at the company had drained the tank to do welding but failed to clean out residue. Fumes from the residue of alcohol and silicone ignited, knocking the cover off of the tank and setting fire to approximately an inch of the antiperspirant in the bottom of the tank.

Andover High School learned it would not be able to collect any of the $235,000 officials had hoped to raise this year by accepting out-of-town students at $4,700 tuition each.

Residents hot for housing waiting list

■ HOUSING

the city of Lawrence, so we immediately have a disadvantage," she said. The $763 determined to be the area's fair-market value for a two-bedroom apartment, for example, does not fly in Andover, and the Housing Authority has to get special permission from HUD to request 120 percent of the area's fair market value for rental units.

In addition to handling vouchers, the Housing Authority, an entity that is a local arm of HUD but has locally-elected commissioners, oversees five public housing developments in Andover, four of them for the elderly and one, Memorial Circle, for families. The 56 units in Memorial Circle have about 458 families on that waiting list, said Metzmaekers.

Meanwhile, Metzmaekers said she is considered having her office divert all telephone calls to voice mail for certain blocks of time this week, just so that work can get done, other than fielding inquiries about the Section 8 waiting list.

Five-year deal for rental units

Residents of Andover Commons, the 167-unit privately owned but federally subsidized apartment complex on Railroad Street, will be secure in their affordable rents for another five years, according to reports at Monday night's Housing Partnership Committee meeting.

Planning Director Steve Colyer told the committee that he had been made aware of an agreement between owner John Corcoran of Corcoran Management Company and the US Department of Housing and Urban Development to extend for five years the housing's affordability, which was to expire later this year. In exchange, Corcoran will receive a higher subsidy from the government; the residents, mostly elderly, will continue to pay 30 percent of their income as their portion of the rent.

Town affordable housing advocates had been scrambling for a way to save the affordability of Andover Commons, which accounts for more than 15 percent of the town's affordable housing stock as calculated by the state. The fear was that Corcoran would "opt out" of keeping the apartments affordable and convert them to market-rate units, likely forcing most if not all the current tenants to leave.

Committee Chairman Dave Hastings said he would huddle with Colyer, committee member Susan Stott, and Elder Services Director Jeanne Madden to organize a forum with the tenants to discuss ways to prepare for the end of the extension, which will again call the housing into question. Possibilities raised for insuring long-term affordability for the units included purchase by a non-profit tenants' association, or purchase by the town.

This work includes filing the preapplications that have been mailed in since they appeared in the Sunday paper. "They're just flooding in," she said Tuesday.

"We've already got a box full of them." The preapplication lottery is public and will be held at 10 a.m. on Oct. 4 at the AHA Tenant Council Office at 41 Chestnut St.

Housing Partnership seeks AvalonBay downsizing

By Adam Groff

The Housing Partnership Committee Monday night agreed to adopt a position in favor of further reducing the density of AvalonBay Communities' plan for a 136-unit luxury apartment complex with some affordable units on River Road. The recommendation was part of the committee's last-minute comments to the Zoning Board of Appeals, which rules on the acceptability of comprehensive permit applications like AvalonBay's. Closing statements before the ZBA on the application are set for Monday night.

Members of the affordable housing advocacy committee said they wanted lower density for the nine-acre site of the current Monastery of St. Clare because they want to encourage family-friendly housing, and current project plans include very little in the way of recreation areas for youth. AvalonBay developer Bill McLaughlin, however, has said that the project's target market is "empty nesters," older people whose children have moved away.

Committee Chairman Dave Hastings proposed setting an approximate density limit of 12 units per acre for proposals before the committee, which would have AvalonBay reducing the project to 108 units.

"The dilemma we face as affordable housing advocates is that a project is not going to happen if it's not financially viable," said committee member Susan Stott. "I'd like to see them reduce the density as much as possible and add play areas, but not to the point where it's not viable."

Representatives from the neighborhood group Protect Andover Zoning were at the meeting to voice their own concerns about density and the strain such a project, situated in the far western corner of town, would place on emergency and public safety services.

Planning Director Steve Colyer agreed, but he also opined that the ZBA would probably approve the project with conditions.

"Between you, me and a fencepost, I don't think they're going to outright deny it," said Colyer. Two weeks ago the ZBA, in its first comprehensive permit ruling in 13 years, did reject outright the application of Joseph Zagarella to build 12 townhouses on less than one acre of land at the corner of Lowell Street and Wild Rose Drive.

The Housing Partnership Committee has no decision-making power, but it advises the Zoning Board of Appeals, a body charged with judging comprehensive permit applications according to criteria laid down in the state's Chapter 40B Comprehensive Permit Law. Hastings will attend the ZBA meeting Monday night to present the committee's position.

Local Miss Manners serves up polite company, for a price

By Judy Wakefield

Just getting your kids to the table for a family dinner is a major achievement these days.

Who has time to notice their manners, never mind do something about them? Well, locally, it's Margaret Musso of Andover.

Musso comes to the rescue of those looking to do more than simply teach their kids not to talk with mouths full of food. In fact, she's an etiquette professional who says business is booming around town. Manners are enjoying a revived awareness and it's not just Girl Scouts earning the etiquette badge signing up for Musso's classes.

Her manners course for kids attracted six boys and two girls on a hot summer afternoon earlier this month, and a local school has hired her to run a manners course for all its students. Plus, a first-ever etiquette course for adults is being run by the Department of Community Services this fall. Participants will pay $132 each to beef up on manners used during a four-course meal.

Andover represents a piece of what's happening on the national manners scene. Etiquette expert and author John Bridges, author of three guides to better behavior, made the pages of People magazine last week talking about the good manners revival sweeping the nation.

Kids are at the center of that revival as parents are taking more notice of their bad behavior and looking to change it.

Margaret Musso uses a Palmer's meal to teach kids the finer points of fine dining.

"It's such a fast-paced life we lead and kids have so many activities that families don't have a chance to sit down and practice good manners like generations before us did," said Musso. "It (good manners) doesn't happen in my house as much as I would like it to."

So, this wife of Michael Musso and mother of two — Ryan, 9 and Jacqueline, 5 — does the practicing for parents. Certified in 1998 by the Protocol School of Washington, she hosted a two-hour manners course for kids ages 8 to 12 this summer that attracted eight kids, six of them boys. Parents paid $69 per child for the manners session, which included lunch at Palmer's Restaurant on Elm Street.

Some good manners were served up along with the salad, chicken, potatoes and green beans. For example, kids were told it is good manners to wait for the host to pick up her spoon before you start eating. And, they were told to "hold a soup spoon like a pencil and tip it away from you and bring it up to your mouth" when you eat soup.

When Andrew Townsend, 9 and a student at St. Augustine School, talked about the time "a waiter took my buffalo wings and mashed potatoes and I wasn't even done," Musso told him proper placement of the salad fork is the key to keeping your food in place when you step away from the

Life in Lima: A Peruvian perspective

College senior Abbey Goldstein sees shantytowns, South America

By Kristen Munson

When most people go to Peru they don't expect to visit the shantytowns of Lima and poor mountaintop farming communities. Most people don't expect to work in a facility without restrooms. But Abbey Goldstein isn't most people.

The 21-year-old senior at Vanderbilt University spent six weeks this summer doing community service in Peru. "I was stepping out of everything that I'm used to," she says.

For the first four weeks she lived in Villa EL Salvador in Lima, and organized a book-making project for 6- to 8-year-old kids. She also worked in a volunteer-run senior center, serving food and making crafts. "It's not like a senior center you'd picture here - there were no resources - no bathrooms," she recalls.

The seniors make greeting cards from beads that they sell to tourists. However, most tourists don't consider a senior center a hot spot to visit. So upon her return, Goldstein brought some card samples to a store in Reading, Sense of Wonder, that has agreed to carry them. Half of the proceeds will be sent back to the seniors.

After spending last semester abroad in Spain, Goldstein decided that going south instead of east might teach her something different from what she could learn in a classroom. "Seeing how happy and full of life these people are - and then to see where they live - it makes you think a lot about what really constitutes happiness." Seeing the contrast between the senior centers of the United States to those of Peru, is what affected her most.

But Goldstein didn't need a wake-up call, and she didn't need a lesson on how to appreciate the little things. Community service is not unfamiliar territory for her. While at school she frequently visits the senior centers of Nashville, Tenn.

The primary challenge for Goldstein in Peru was trying to accept a different culture. "It's hard when you see something wrong and try to fix it from an American point of view. You're like, why are you throwing trash into the street? And (that attitude) is just wrong," she says.

The final two weeks of her excursion were spent in the mountains where she taught English to children. The political science/Spanish double major used the trip to exercise her knowledge of both areas, and in the process learned that she was a victim of "the American urge to make things right. You do have to have a certain frame of mind to do this. You have to really be open-minded," she says.

She found that the trip was more about learning about the cultural differences and appreciating them, than of trying to change them. She says, "When you have an experience like this, it is so much more than service."

Goldstein went through a non-profit international abroad organization called Cross Cultural Solutions (CCS). The group focuses on international volunteerism and showing visitors the "culture and the dignity of the Peruvians," says CCS representative Steve Rosenthal. The experience was more than just volunteering her time, "I feel like I've learned more from these people than I can ever give back." The aspect of Peruvian culture that she will remember most is their hospitality. "They have such a strong feeling of community. They understand the need to pull together - to work together."

table.

"You put the fork so that it looks like it's 10 (minutes)-to-4 on a clock to let them know you are done," said Ryan Musso, who was helping out his mother at the class.

She also passed along the napkin tip. When you leave the table and put the napkin on your chair, it means you will be back. However, a napkin on the table means you are done.

"This is not McDonald's," Musso reminded the group when lunch was served and eight pairs of eyes were on the chicken pieces. "It's okay to use your fingers at McDonald's, but we will use a knife and fork here."

Students at St. Augustine School will hear the same talk next month as all of them will be taking a manners course with Musso. The school's cultural committee has hired Musso to run sessions for all students in kindergarten through grade eight.

on cultural dining for adults. Participants will be eating a four-course meal at Andover Inn on the Phillips Academy campus, and brushing up on good manners.

Musso's calendar is also filling with corporate sessions. Companies have hired her to discourage employees from workplace rudeness.

Musso, who works in health care, said she has always been interested in good manners. "It's been a passion of mine since I was a little girl and I really enjoy doing this," she said.

"Getting back to manners is something that will never go out of style. It's a life skill and enhances one's life. People want to be around people who have good manners," she says.

Bourdelaais: A career 'with something more to it than what's on the scoreboard'

By Adam Goff

After 33 years as a home-grown educator and sports role model, Physical Education Coordinator Dick Bourdelaais is about to reach the end zone.

The community will recognize his contributions at a retirement dinner at the Ramada Rolling Green on Sept. 7.

An Andover High School football and track star, Bourdelaais returned to his alma mater first as a teacher and assistant football and track coach under current School Committee member Dick Collins, then as head indoor-track coach in his own right. He was athletic director for four years, and most recently, since 1987, he has run the physical-education program.

Born and raised on a dirt road in West Andover just over the Lawrence border, Bourdelaais graduated from Andover High School in 1961. He went on to play football and study physical education at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, after which he taught physical education for two years in Springfield. In 1968, a similar position opened up in the Andover public schools, and he decided to apply for it.

"It was the greatest thing that ever happened to me in terms of professional satisfaction," says Bourdelaais of his move back to Andover.

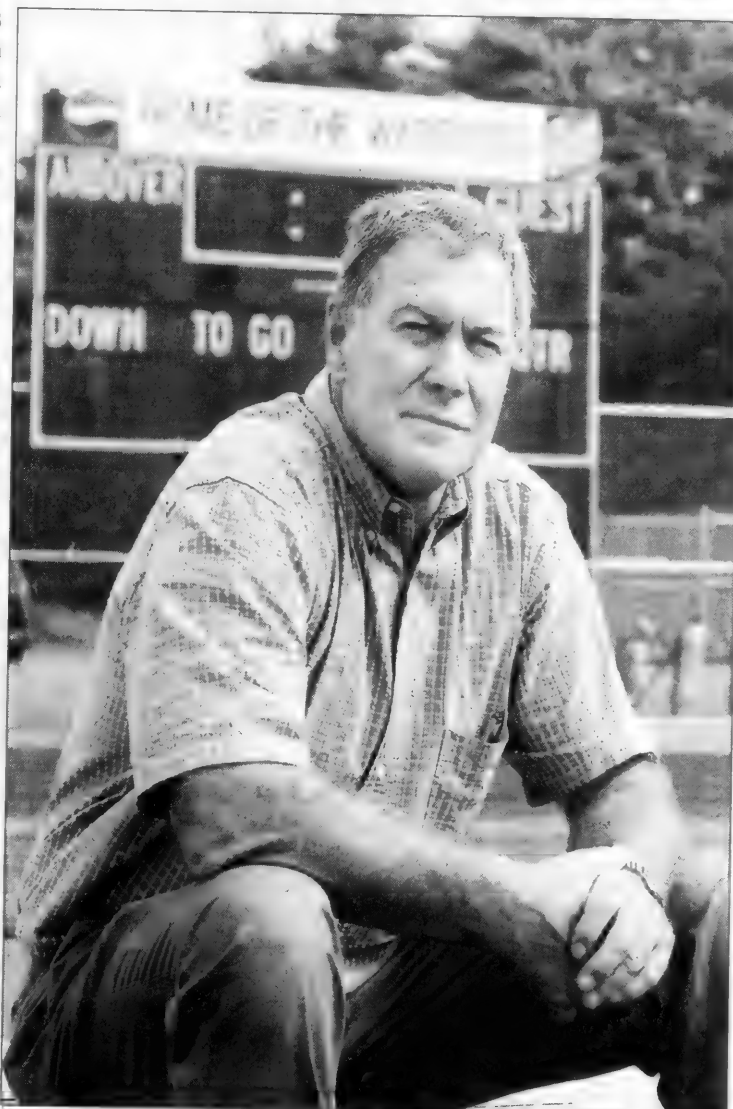

Collins, both mentor and colleague to Bourdelaais, came to Andover in 1959 to coach football, and Bourdelaais was the first team captain to be elected under him. Collins says that working with Bourdelaais from the time he was a high-school student through his rise to department head was "the most gratifying thing you could ever imagine."

"We worked in harmony, no matter what the status of either one of us was, from the moment I walked into Andover until I retired," says Collins. "You'll never find a more wonderful guy in all your life."

"Dick was a great teacher," says Bourdelaais of Collins, returning the compliment. "He had a strong value structure, which kids need at that age."

Bourdelaais says Collins helped impart to him the spirit that he nurtured throughout his athletic life and professional career. His colleagues say Bourdelaais has carried this spirit into his work in Andover athletics and physical education.

His colleagues say the retiring Dick Bourdelaais brought perspective to the AHS physical education program.

That spirit can be summed up simply, and was something he sensed from the start: "Somewhere down inside, there was this thing that said there's something more to it than what's on the scoreboard," he says. "I mean, it was important to me to be competitive - I wasn't interested in losing all the time. But although championships are nice, you have to feel for the kids who aren't playing all the time."

That was one of the feelings that lead Bourdelaais from athletics into physical education, because, he says, physical education is for everybody, not just athletes. He describes athletics as the "advanced placement of physical education," but his goal as an educator has been to impart to all students the benefits of understanding physical health and wellness and of being involved in life-long physical activity.

"As I've said before, the body that holds this brain is pretty important," he says. "We provide a holistic education."

Asked what he thinks have been the highlights of his career, Bourdelaais's answers range, like that career, from action on the ground to long-term administrative planning. He mentions going with the Andover

High football team as Collins's assistant coach to the state Super Bowl in 1973, '74 and '75, and winning the latter two. Then he refers to the five years as physical-education coordinator, during which he was involved with designing and seeing to completion Andover High's field house and the new fitness room, as well as the South School gymnasium. Most recently, he says he's been gratified to have helped set the physical-education standards and benchmarks for Andover public schools.

"But my true job satisfaction has been in the continued improvement of the high school (physical education) program," he says. That improvement paid off this spring, when the program won the first-ever Quality Physical Education Program of the Year award, given by the state physical-education association.

Bourdelaais says he has seen changes for the better in education in general and in Andover in particular during the past 30 years, including the development of an approach that involves students as "partners in education," rather than passive recipients of a lot of lectures and drills. But he says the students themselves, aside from changing fashions, have not changed very much.

"The basic core of kids hasn't changed. They still have the same wants and likes and desires," he says. "If you took a kid from the '70s and plunked him down here today and said 'What do you want?' the answers would be the same."

"The perspective Dick has brought to physical education has always been the right one," says current Athletic Director Jim Hurley, another Andover native, who followed Bourdelaais into the school system and calls him a mentor. "I think his feeling is that you have to give kids a chance to be kids. He's had a great perspective on what coaching and teaching and physical education is all about."

Bourdelaais will be honored on Friday, Sept. 7, at the Ramada Rolling Green, with cocktails at 6 p.m. and dinner at 7. Dick Collins and many other Bourdelaais colleagues can be expected to tell a lot of stories at the retiree's expense. Tables of 10 are available. Tickets cost $30 and are available at the athletic office from 9 a.m. to noon and from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. Contact Jim Hurley or Maureen Morrison with questions at 978-623-8570.

A nice run - Dick Bourdelaais, an Andover High class of 1961 track and football star, was the school's hurdles and indoor-track coach, among other titles he has held.

At right, he contemplates the end of a long career at his alma mater.

Dana not so dear....

Hollywood actress Dana Delany was among the graduates of Phillips Academy's first co-ed class back in 1974. She's proudly hailed as an Emmy Award-winning actress (for China Beach) in PA's alum-related publications.

Actress and Phillips grad Dana Delany

We don't know what the PA reaction will be when her new show hits the screen on the Fox network. It's a soap opera called Pasadena and it's got a "pleasurable disturbing quality, as opposed to a deeply unsettling, run-from-the room quality," says the show's writer.

Yikes!

Writer Mike White, the brains behind the indie stalker comedy Chuck & Buck, told Entertainment Weekly that the show "puts lunacy in overdrive with this story of a dysfunctional rich family." Delany plays a villainous mother of a teen daughter.

Dana, dearest, perhaps?

The three Rs: Roll over...

How about a round of biscuit treats for the 20 dogs that graduated from the Department of Community Services' obedience training course this week?

They spent an hour per week for the past eight weeks sitting, staying and coming to owners on command. Their graduation ceremony was held last night, Wednesday, Aug. 22. There were two groups of graduates — puppies and older dogs. Graduates were mixed, with no particular breed dominating the class, according to Mary Donohue of DCS.

She reported there were two poodles, a Jack Russell terrier, golden retrievers, a corgi, a basset hound and lots of labrador mixes among the graduates.

Good grades help net invitation to Britain

By Devon O'Neal

After weeks of interviews and a lengthy selection process, Andover sixth-grade students Alyssa Lim and Eric O'Connor received a letter inviting them to travel to Europe. The prerequisite for the trip, organized by a group called People to People, was that the students had to have good grades.

People to People, an organization founded by former president Dwight D. Eisenhower, was designed to let children experience life in another country. Thirty-seven sixth-graders from Andover and its neighboring communities, including Alyssa and Eric, were involved recently in a two-week People to People excursion to England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales.

Alyssa's mother Diane says, "There are three ways for them to get nominated into the program: by a teacher, by an alumni of the program or by the national test database."

Once chosen, the children packed their bags for what for many of them was their first time away from home; many were traveling to a place where even their parents had never ventured before. Were they frightened? "No, I wasn't even nervous," says Alyssa. "I had only been to Nature's Classroom before, with school, but I was excited to go."

Blimey! Eric O'Connor and Alyssa Lim have returned from a memorable trip to Great Britain, as part of People to People.

The children visited many tourist attractions in their short stay in each country, including the Tower of London, and the changing of the guards at Buckingham Palace.

While Eric's favorite country was Scotland, Alyssa's was Ireland.

Eric agreed with Alyssa when she said, "Here there aren't many castles so that was fun because there are a lot more castles and older places in England."

The castles and food are what they both looked forward to and enjoyed the most. Eric's mother chuckles, "He came back asking for fish and chips." They were also made to dine on Irish stew and Welsh lamb, and to drink cups of English tea to get a true European feel for things. McDonald's was not an option for them.

Since returning from their vacation, both kids have received invitations to journey next summer on a 21-day tour of Germany, Switzerland, France and Spain. Alyssa and Eric had so much fun this summer that they are already planning for this next trip.

But the students also are being encouraged to help pay for it, so it looks like they have many lawns to mow in the meantime. Diane Lim says, "Alyssa has already asked if she could babysit her younger sister and has encouraged us to go out so that she can earn some extra money."

Devon O'Neal is a Townsman intern.

What lies beneath is not a shark

Lorraine Lordi

It could have been the most spectacular day of the summer. The sky shone a brilliant blue, the sun a buttercup yellow, the sea a shimmering sapphire. More importantly, though, after two months of living amidst the clamor of college companions I was less than fond of. I had finally managed to get away by myself and be alone.

Alone on a little Cape Cod beach. Alone with my thoughts. Alone with my blanket and alone with my raft. How I managed to escape for those few hours I can't recall. But I do know this: While I was tiptoeing off that day, joy rose up in me like gigantic bubbles and practically lifted me off of my feet. For finally, after all this time, I was free.

Free to sit and gaze at the ocean for as long as I wanted. Free to be silent and to think my own thoughts. Free to dive into the cool, sparkling waters when the sun's rays sizzled savagely.

Except, well, there was this one little problem. As much as I longed to plunge beneath those alluring ocean waters, I couldn't bring myself to do it.

It was the summer of 1975, you see. The same summer that the movie Jaws came out. Now you understand. And as anyone who spent time on the Cape that summer can attest, no matter how high the mercury rose, no matter how mercilessly the sun beat down on us until we were roasted like capons, no one on those Cape Cod beaches dared to go out frolicking in the ocean waves. Not one single soul.

When we had reached the point of melting like crayons into our beach blankets, we might have gathered up enough courage to wade in up to our ankles. But even then, we were scrutinizing the water the whole time and imagining that at any moment a Great White Shark would suddenly burst out of the soft, shimmering foam and rip us apart, limb by limb, with its razor sharp teeth.

If only I had known then what I know now, I would have been out playing in that ocean like a porpoise that entire summer. In fact, I probably would have led a "Listen up, people, it's only a stupid movie" campaign in order to get the beach-goers that year to delve into reason instead of their fears.

Because, really, if we explore the facts instead of indulging our overactive imaginations, we'd see that one of the last creatures we should be afraid of in this life is a shark. Really. Its true.

Did you know that last year there were only 10 deaths caused by sharks? Only 79 attacks by sharks, too. Compare those 79 injuries to the following statistics: Last year, almost 200,000 people were injured working with nails and screws. Another 44,000 received injuries from toilets. And gardeners compiled 36,000 injuries simply from working in their gardens.

Despite these numbers, I don't see people getting the jitters when they peer into a toolbox or pull out their pruning shears. Nor have any of those toilet injuries made headline news this summer. At least not that I have heard of. But if a shark happens to be spotted close to shore on the East Coast as if the ocean were an unnatural place for sharks to be, we hear all about it. And suddenly, hysteria breaks out all over again.

I wonder why this is. Bees kill far more people than sharks do. So do mosquitos. And if you're fretting about getting a chunk taken out of your skin, you're far better off in the ocean than on the streets of New York City. For in 1987, two people reported getting nibbled by sharks while nearly 1,600 people were bitten by other human beings in the Big Apple.

Still, mention the word "shark" today and people automatically think "crazed killer." Crazed killer? Perhaps we have things turned around a bit. Last year, remember, sharks killed 10 people. And people? We killed over 100 million sharks.

But who's going to make a movie about that?

Lorraine Lordi, a Derry News columnist, wrote the book Passing Showers. Her stories will be appearing in the Townsman.

AN ISLAND OASIS

The Spade and Trowel Garden Club of Andover has been working to establish a traffic island garden at Lowell and Beacon streets. Now in its second season, the civic beautification project is alive and well. Club members selected low-maintenance heat- and drought-tolerant plants from their gardens, such as ornamental grasses, iris, shasta daisy, sedum, aster, coreopsis, rudbeckia, mums and daylilies to contribute to the traffic island garden. The town supplied the soil, compost and wood chip mulch for the two flower beds. During the growing season, club volunteers care for the plants. Now that something of interest is always in bloom, organizers said, members of the public frequently stop to comment about the beautification of this area.

Tons of thanks: Recycling efforts at Folk Festival make mulch for next year

By Adam Groff

When Pat Scanlon of Washington Avenue set out to develop a program to recycle up to 95 percent of the waste generated at the Lowell Folk Festival, one of his biggest challenges was plastic cutlery. His solution: cornstarch forks, spoons and knives.

Of course, there was a lot more to Scanlon's recycling effort than just procuring and distributing 60,000 cornstarch utensils, which are biodegradable.

But after collecting thousands of beverage containers and more than a ton of trash for composting, Scanlon calls his efforts — including using the cornstarch cutlery — a “national model for recycling at special events.”

He wants to see the program play out at other arts festivals.

Scanlon, a recycling and solid-waste consultant with 25 years in the field, is accustomed to seeking out creative solutions. As the founder and past president of MassRecycle and a past board member of the National Recycling Coalition, he's been doing it for a long time.

“I'm always looking for opportunities to move the recycling effort forward just one little notch,” he says. “You can look at recycling like a tree: we've only gotten the low-hanging fruit; now we want to climb it. The thing that sits at the very top of that tree is the special events. They are the most difficult thing to recycle in.”

That's why the energetic Scanlon, a banjo player himself, went to work on the National Park Service's Lowell festival, the largest free music festival in the country, which this year an estimated 250,000 people passed through from July 27 to 29. Last year, at the 2000 festival and with help from a $9,000 grant from the state Executive Office of Environmental Affairs, he and his volunteers collected and sorted over 13,000 beverage containers. But Scanlon had bigger plans, and this year, in addition to more than doubling the number of beverage containers collected, he piloted an ambitious composting program designed to absorb all food and paper (and cornstarch) products.

“I said to myself, if we can make this program work here in Lowell, we can make it work anywhere,” he says.

Scanlon made it work this year with about 100 volunteers, 42 of them from the Lowell YWCA youth program, some from among his fellow parishioners at North Parish Church in Andover, and still others from recycling programs in surrounding communities.

To simplify the process, Scanlon arranged to have just two kinds of trash receptacles at the festival, one for beverage containers and one for everything else. But he arranged for everything else to be biodegradable: festival organizers cooperated with him by mandating that food vendors in the composting area (about a third of the festival) serve food exclusively on paper products.

“Paper is a little more expensive than plastic,” he says. “So we gave them the cornstarch utensils to offset the cost increases.”

Scanlon also secured sponsorship from what some might regard as an unusual source: Wheelabrator North Andover, the trash-to-energy facility that many think of as just another area polluter, contributed $5,000 to the recycling effort, with $1,000 earmarked for the YWCA. The other sponsor was the North East Solid Waste Committee (NESWC), the consortium of 23 communities that take their trash to Wheelabrator. NESWC contributed the $3,500 that purchased the cornstarch utensils.

Throughout the three-day festival, recycling volunteers carted trash to a central location, where it was dumped onto sorting tables. Beverage containers were sorted into deposit and nondeposit plastic bottles and cans and then bagged, to be purchased by the Lowell Redemption Center at five cents for deposits and a penny for nondeposits. Compostable trash was raked over to check for and remove “contaminants” such as foil or plastic, and then raked into a trash truck for delivery to Agresource Inc., a composting company in Ipswich.

And the results? More than 32,000 containers were collected, and deposits totaling $812 went to the YWCA, for a total of $1,812 for that organization. Scanlon says the youth volunteers are using some of the money for a trip to Six Flags, and the rest for programming. In addition, an estimated 3,300 pounds of biodegradable material was trucked to Agresource, where it was mixed with other organic material and placed in large piles for composting.

“I checked on it Friday,” says Scanlon of the composting trash, at that time about three weeks old. “I dug into the pile a little bit, and the cornstarch utensils are the consistency of Silly Putty.”

He says the composting process will be complete in about 8 to 12 weeks, after which the material will be screened and returned to Lowell to be spread on downtown shrubbery. But some of it, says Scanlon, will be reserved and placed in small brown bags, to be distributed at next year's Lowell Folk Festival, where the composting program will be festival-wide. The bags will have labels that say “Put a Little Folk in Your Garden,” with information below.

“It will describe the process and let people know that the waste they left last year is in this bag and has come full circle,” says the man who pioneered curbside recycling in the 1970s. “It shows that it can be done, if people just change their habits and look outside the envelope, away from the familiar to something unfamiliar that's creative and environmentally friendly.”

Scanlon's work in Lowell has already attracted local interest: he has been recruited to emplace a waste recycling program at Phillips Academy during their parents' weekend in October.

Workers sort recyclables at the Lowell Folk Festival.

Compostable trash was raked over to check for and remove “contaminants” such as foil or plastic.

Bagged recyclables are ready to leave this year's Lowell Folk Festival.

About 3,300 pounds of biodegradable material arrives at Agresource.

Youth recycling volunteers collected beverage containers throughout the three-day festival. More than 32,000 containers were collected, and bottle deposits totaling $812 were donated.

New teachers, new friends and the dreaded "H" word

By Sue Tabb

"Everyone hates homework!" 11-year-old Britney Lescarbeau declares emphatically while shopping at Daher's Shoes in Andover on a recent afternoon. The fifth-grader, who will attend Frost Elementary School in Lawrence this fall, is talking about the upcoming school year. While Britney's not a big fan of homework, she is looking forward to reading and art – her favorite subject. In fact, she would like to be an art teacher when she grows up.

Britney's brother, 7-year-old Ryan Lescarbeau, will enter third grade at the Frost school. When asked what he's most looking forward to this school year, he simply answers "playing hockey." Ryan, obviously a young sports enthusiast, is delighted that the gymnasium at his new school is bigger than the one at his previous school.

Another shoe shopper, 12-year-old Alex Vandenberghe, will enter the seventh grade at St. Augustine's in Andover. First on the agenda, though, is a trip to Belgium for a two-week vacation. Alex's family is from Belgium, and she speaks fluent Flemish. Her favorite subject is math, but she's not so crazy about science. What is she most looking forward to?

"I'm excited about meeting my friends again that I haven't seen all summer," says Alex.

Meeting friends is also at the top of the list for two sixth-graders from Andover, both entering Doherty Middle School this fall. Peter Hitchko, who is 11 years old, is excited about attending a new school. Kaitlin Picard, also 11, enjoyed violin camp this summer and will vacation on Cape Cod before the school year kicks off. She is a little anxious about switching classes though, something new to middle school students.

Britney Lescarbeau

"I'm looking forward to meeting new kids and making new friends," says Peter.

When it comes to high school students, well, you can probably guess what they're looking forward to – graduation! As "seniors-to-be" Erin Campbell and Wildania Urena hang out at Starbucks on Main Street in Andover, they talk about their plans for the school year. Erin, 17, is excited about senior activities and outings. She will have a pretty heavy schedule when you consider college essays and interviews – she would like to attend the Massachusetts College of Art next year.

"I'm looking forward to applying to colleges – and at the same time dreading it!" Erin says.

Wildania, 18, will graduate early and work to save money for college. She wants to stay local and become a teacher, attending either Merrimack College, Salem State College or the University of Massachusetts at Lowell.

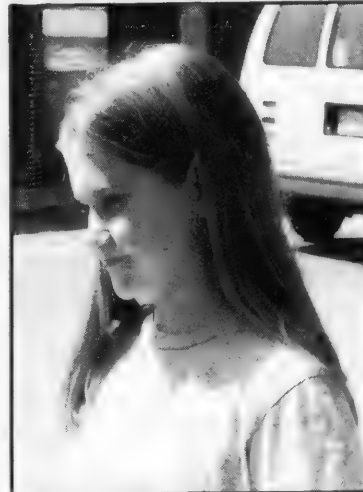

Nine-year-old Erik Scott, who will enter the fourth grade at Franklin Elementary School in North Andover, likes his free time.

"My favorite subject seems to be recess," he jokes.

Erik adds that he enjoys reading chapter books and that he is motivated to get better grades in math this year.

"(I'm looking forward to) my new teacher - I've heard she's really nice," says Erik.

Erik's sister, 7-year-old Hailey Scott, is also excited about her new teacher but a little concerned about "a little harder math and a little harder homework." She can relax for a few more weeks, since the family plans a trip to California before the school year begins.

BACK TO SCHOOL

Tips for a great back-to-school experience

(NAPSA) – At home or away, being in school is one of the most important stages in your life. Friends, classes, activities and environment can all affect your experience. Following are some back-to-school tips from the experts at Ikea, a home furnishings retailer, to guarantee a great start to the new term.

- Be yourself: Remember that this is your time at school. From academics to social circles, be comfortable and express yourself. Try different classes, activities and internships. It's your life – keep learning, reaching and growing.

- Your private getaway: Long day, bad date or exam stress – there are many reasons why your room should be a haven for rest and relaxation. Pick out soft and cozy sheets or get some extra pillows to fluff and hug. Put up photos of friends and family to fill your room with friendly faces. Surround yourself with bright and cheerful colors to add comfort to your sanctuary.

- Time will set you free: Using a calendar to plan out deadlines and workloads will show how much time you really have for other activities. Keep a clock visible so you can see how much time you are spending on each assignment. A magnetic bulletin board by your desk will hold your notes and remind you of important assignments. And, use your time wisely – schedule exercise into your day by walking to class instead of taking the bus.

- Study secrets: Environment is key when trying to get work done, so try different studying methods until you find what works best for you (large groups or individually, with music or quiet). If you have one main light in the room, try adding a desk lamp to make reading easier on your eyes. When you're comfortable while studying, you'll enjoy it more and study longer.

- A cluttered desk is a cluttered mind: Make use of bookshelves and other storage items to reduce clutter from your desk, floor or room. Invest in a file cabinet to organize paperwork for each class. Gather and tuck away loose computer wires and cables by using cord reels and clips. Keep a wastepaper basket handy to get rid of excess papers, receipts and notes.

When setting up your room, make use of bookshelves and other storage items to reduce clutter.

DCS to hold auditions for Confetti Kids theater group

The department of community services will hold auditions for the Confetti Kids theater group Sept. 7 at 3:30 p.m. in the West Elementary School auditorium on Beacon Street in Andover. Membership is for children in the Merrimack Valley in grades three through eight.

Children must be accompanied by an adult and should be prepared to perform a simple monologue, such as a nursery rhyme, child's poem or dramatic interpretation. They will be asked to sing one verse of "America" ("my country 'tis of thee"). Participants will be chosen for poise, dramatic ability and voice quality.

Confetti Kids will meet Thursdays, from 3:15 to 4:30 p.m., in West Elementary School's music room. Theatrical skills will be developed with skits, pantomimes and improvisational exercises in class. The group also develops a musical repertoire and occasionally performs for community events. There is a tuition fee and a costume fee. For more information, contact Josie Walker at (978) 475-8261 or Maureen Brennan at (978) 689-2399.

BACK TO SCHOOL

Accessories help students go back to school in style

(NAPSA) – When looking for their own back-to-school style, many students are taking a walk on the wild side this season and separating themselves from the pack with metallics, animal prints and fur.

“Students want to personalize their style with backpacks, binders and other items that reflect their individuality.

They start with a basic product and accessorize it with key chains, picture frames or stickers to make it their own,” says Petter Knutrud, Staples’ senior product manager.

According to Mr. Knutrud, students will use the following “top ten” products to express their unique style.

1. Washable, non-shrink fabric book covers in a variety of patterns and colors are engineered to stretch over hardcover books.

2. Translucent colors, metallics and iridescents are this year’s trend on notebooks, portfolios, organizers, pens, pencils, lunch bags and picture frames.

3. Faux fur is a must-have for decorating a room or locker, showing up on everything from pencil cases to picture frames and mirrors in hot colors such as pink and purple.

4. Black backpacks with a detachable basketball to popular messenger bags with a like-leather look in shades of silver and ice blue are popular.

5. Key chains come in all shapes, sizes and colors, whether they’re clip-on watches, licensed characters or mini-games.

6. This season, kids will be hunting for animal prints and shapes on a variety of school supplies, such as pencil pouches and fluffy feather pens.

7. For those who can’t get enough of J.K. Rowling’s young wizard, Harry Potter, there’s glue, supplies and glue sticks.

8. Personalizing binders, folders and notebooks with pictures is very popular and can be easier with a digital camera.

9. The gel pen craze broadens this season with new gel crayons, which give kids the feeling of a crayon with the vibrancy of gel ink.

10. Kids will go for insulated lunch bags that include ice packs and come in a variety of colors and styles, including hot pink, purple and prints such as leopard, zebra and snakeskin.

Gold's Gym to renovate new Andover site

PRESS RELEASE

Gold's Gym
10-12 Main St.
Andover, MA 01810
(978) 474-1888

Gold's Gym Executive Health and Fitness (formerly Silverado Athletic Club) is set to begin renovations on the 9,600-square-foot space located at 10-12 Main St., Andover, Mass. The owners, John Grossi, Ralph Bagarella and Dave DosSantos bring with them years of experience, winning numerous national awards for excellence in the health and fitness industry.

Mr. Grossi, Mr. Bagarella and Mr. DosSantos have enlisted the expertise of Rudy Fabiano of Fabiano Designs International, a health club architectural firm based in Montclair, NJ. Plans for the multi-level club include opening up the space and exposing the brick to give it a New York loft look.

In addition to bringing in the most up-to-date equipment and programming, Gold's Gym Executive Health and Fitness will become a co-ed facility. The upscale locker rooms will now each house a steam room and dry sauna, as well as quality personal care amenities. In addition to state-of-the-art fitness, the club will offer child care, tanning facilities and a juice bar.

Current members of Gold's Gym Executive Health and Fitness will be allowed to have reciprocal use of the 60,000-square-foot Gold's Gym Fitness and Wellness Center that is being built next to the new Loop mall in Methuen, Mass. This modern $5 million facility, scheduled to open in March 2002, will offer an indoor pool and Jacuzzi, full-court basketball, an indoor track and a women's only workout center, along with the latest in fitness equipment.

Programming at the new Methuen facility will include a wide variety of aerobics classes, from the more traditional to the newest trends: yoga, kick-boxing, Pilates, Spinning and children's and senior fitness classes. Swim lessons for both children and adults, plus aquacise classes, will be offered in the Olympic-sized pool.

The designs for the new Gold's Gym in Andover were done by Fabiano Designs International, a health club architectural firm based in Montclair, NJ.

The Gold's Gym Fitness and Wellness Center in Methuen will also have an Executive Business Center from which you may have high-speed Internet access at your fingertips. Of course, there will be a modern tanning studio, affordable child care, a juice bar and a sportswear shop. For more information, call (978) 474-1888.

When should you have your child's eyes checked?

PRESS RELEASE

Andover Eye Care
77 Main St.
Andover, MA 01810
(978) 749-7300

Have you had your child's eyes examined for the school year yet? I don't mean the basic vision screening offered by the school. According to the staff at Andover Eye Care, your children should have a thorough eye exam annually, not only to check their vision, but to examine the health of their eyes.

One of the most commonly asked questions is "When should I have my child's eyes checked?" According to John McHale, O.D. of Andover Eye Care, "All children should have their eyes examined by an eye doctor at least by the time they enter school."

He also said the American Optometric Association recommends children have their first regular eye exam at six months. Follow-up exams should occur at age three, and then of course, again before starting school.

"The bottom line is that it is really never too early for an eye exam," he said. "Eye doctors can conduct an eye exam long before a child can read, or even talk for that matter. Most eye problems are easily treated once the problem is diagnosed."

The staff at Andover Eye Care can help. Andover Eye Care is the newest member of the Reading Eye Associates' and Wakefield Eye Associates' family. They have been caring for the area's vision needs for more than 20 years. So, although they might be fairly new to Andover, they are far from new to eye care.

Andover Eye Care is conveniently located on 77 Main Street in Andover, behind the House of Clean, and directly across the parking lot from the Andover Book Store. The shop is stunning, filled with antiques and warm colors. The selection is unmatched. Brand names include Air Titanium, Dolce & Gabbana, Calvin Klein, Gucci, Modo, Jones New York, Oakley, Polo, Silhouette, Paragraphe, Intrigue, and many others. "I'm very proud of our selection for adults," said Todd Berberian, R.D.O., "but our selection for children is great, too." Children's brand names include Chesterfield, Polo, Flexon, Air Titanium Kids, and much, much more.

According to Keith Willis, R.D.O., their children's lenses are made only of polycarbonate. "This is the safest lens to use, not only for kids, but for adults, too, especially if they are active in sports," he said. Proudly promoting high quality, comprehensive service with a small-town touch, Andover's Eye Care services include eye exams, contact lenses, the best selection in town of both prescription and non-prescription sunglasses, and according to Todd Berberian, R.D.O., "the nicest glasses you've ever had."

Opticians Keith Willis and Todd Berberian pride themselves on their ability to blend color and face shape, and marry this with frame materials and styles to provide you with the most complementing glasses you've ever had.

Andover Eye Care is open Monday through Friday, 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Thursday until 7:30 p.m. Saturday hours are 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. For more information, call (978) 749-7300.

Tammy's Dance Connection teaches love of dance

PRESS RELEASE

Tammy's Dance Connection

1866 Main St.
Tewksbury, MA 01876
(978) 858-0209

What makes Tammy's Dance Connection different from the rest? We do not claim to be the biggest, the best or the school with the most trophies. Whether recreational or more serious, we simply feel that everyone, both young and old, can experience the love of dance as a rewarding one.

If you are looking for quality dance training, positive reinforcement, self-confidence and the desire to be the best you can be, call Tammy's Dance Connection.

Our students' credits are numerous, including 2001 Starbound National Gold Medal Winners recently returning from Atlantic City in July. We brought down 17 routines - and all 17 returned with Gold Medals. Students have been Nutcracker performers, Walt Disney World performers, scholarship recipients, performing for local senior centers and charitable organizations, but most importantly, learning life lessons at Tammy's Dance Connection Inc. We feel most proud of the difference we make in every student that walks through our studio doors. Listen to the students themselves:

• "Thank you ... I would not be the same person that I am today had it not been for your teaching. When I first came to the studio, I had little self-confidence. You played a major part in changing all that. I never thought that I could be a dancer. I always had a negative image of myself, and being a member of the company has helped me realize that I don't have to be the best. I can just be who I am. Thank you." (Lauren D., Tewksbury)

• "Thank you for being a wonderful role model for my little girl!" (Julie, Bradford)

• "Each year I feel I am improving and I owe it all to you for always pushing me. You inspire me to try my best at all times and be the best dancer I can possibly be. My love of dance continues to grow each year." (Carly R., Tewksbury)

• "Thank you for making Anna's first year of dance so much fun. She learned so much and really enjoyed it. The most rewarding part, though, was the look of triumph on her face when she came off stage after her number on recital night." (Kim P., Tewksbury)

• "Because of you, Miss Tammy, I've found an everlasting love - my love of dance. You once said, 'Love what you are doing or don't do it.' I've learned not to dance to be better than anyone else or because someone wants me to - I dance because you've shown me meaning and emotion in every step. You will always be in my heart, along with my love of dance. It's hard to move on to college, but everything I've learned from you and from dance I will carry with me forever!" (Janel, Billerica)

If you are looking for a difference in quality dance training and how to be the best you can be, call Tammy's Dance Connection and discover the enjoyment of dance.

I would like to extend my sincere thanks and gratitude to all of my students and parents for their continued support and friendship. I am so very proud of all the students' and staff's accomplishments. As TDC now enters its 14th season, we are pleased to announce that we have expanded our current second studio to a new bigger location. Thank you again for your loyalty and being a part of the TDC family.

Ms. Tammy

Freshmen orientation

The Andover High School student government representatives invite all incoming freshmen to join them for orientation activities Sept. 4, from 1 to 3 p.m. Freshmen should report to the Collins Center and come dressed comfortably.

The welcoming event will provide students with the opportunity to meet fellow classmates, run through their schedules, locate their classrooms and become familiar with the high school prior to the general opening of the school on Sept. 6.

Each student is reminded to purchase a lock for his or her hallway locker before school begins. Locks will be issued for gym lockers by the respective physical education teacher. Student schedules will be mailed toward the end of the summer. If you do not receive your schedule, a copy will be available at orientation.

Notice to parents

Bus routes are supplied by the Andover School Department's transportation office. During the summer, the school department reviews and changes the bus routes as necessary.

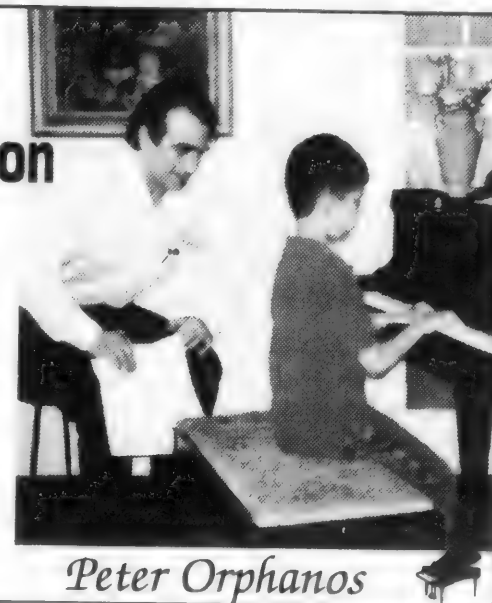

Information regarding new students may not have reached the transportation office prior to routes being completed. In these cases, the school department welcomes calls for information about bus stops and/or pickup times. However, residents are asked that calls requesting changes in routes not be made during the first 10 days of the new school year. Also, please do not ask bus drivers to make changes.

Your patience is appreciated when trying to reach the transportation office by telephone - phone lines get busy very quickly. The school department will be happy to speak to parents after things settle down.

For school-related information, visit www.andoverpublicschools.com.

Kindergarten transportation

Please note that bus stops on the regular routes and the mid-day kindergarten routes may be different.

Students attending kindergarten classes at the Bancroft, Sanborn, Shawsheen, South and West elementary schools ride on the regular route buses once a day.

Students attending morning session: Parents should refer to the regular routes for their school and neighborhood for inbound transportation bus stop and time of pickup. At the end of the morning session, students are transported home on the mid-day kindergarten buses. Please refer to the AM route for the approximate time of drop-off in your neighborhood.

Students attending afternoon session: Parents should refer to the mid-day PM kindergarten routes for inbound transportation bus stop and time of pickup for their neighborhood. At the end of the afternoon session, students are transported home on the regular bus routes.

Those attending Bancroft, Sanborn, South and West schools: Bus routes that have an early pickup time in the morning and arrive at school around 8:15 a.m. are first bus trips and will also leave the school first at the end of the day; please be at regular routing bus stops for your neighborhood by 3 p.m. Bus routes that have a later pickup time in the morning (after 8:15 a.m.) are second trips, and students leave their school at the end of the day at approximately 3:20 to 3:25 p.m.; please be at the regular route bus stop by 3:20 p.m. Any exceptions to the above procedures will be noted on the particular bus route.

Those attending Shawsheen school: Routes are combined with St. Augustine's School, and drop-off order of students is usually the same as morning pickup. Depending on the area, drop-offs will begin at approximately 3:05 to 3:10 p.m.

Merrimack Valley Pirates SWIM TEAM TRYOUTS

Tues. August 21 or Tues., August 28, 6:00pm

Greater Lawrence Technical School Pool, 57 River Rd., Andover

The Merrimack Valley Pirates swim team is a member of United States Swimming and is an active participant in New England Swimming. We have over 100 swimmers ranging in age from 6 to 18. Our swimmers have varying abilities ranging from novice swimmers, just beginning competitive swimming, to nationally ranked age group swimmers.

The goal of the team is to provide age-appropriate training that enables swimmers to realize their full potential—regardless of whether that swimmer has the ability to compete on a local, regional or national level. Our training sessions emphasize stroke technique and have very high coach to swimmer ratios.

Survey finds teens know value of fashion

(NAPSA) – When it comes to fashion, today's teens may care more than you think about prices.

Debunking the perception that teens only care about the hottest fashion trends, a new poll by the Opinion Research Corporation found that 55 percent of teens surveyed said that price does play a role when shopping for back-to-school fashions, but trends and style continue to rank high on their priority list.

"The battle of high fashion versus high prices can turn events such as back-to-school shopping into a trying experience," says Colleen Healy, shopping expert for Marshalls.

According to Ms. Healy, some of this year's biggest (and most affordable) fashion trends include the following:

- Young women – Jeans, corduroys and khakis in solids, stretch fabric or bright colors such as plum and berry. For colder weather, turtle necks and long duster sweaters can help keep girls cozy and stylish.

- Young men – Denim will play a huge role in pants and jackets this season. Dark, rinsed, acid or stonewashed denim, when paired with button-down shirts (worn open or layered with a tee), will make a strong statement. For a classic look, crew-neck or high v-neck sweaters will be worn in a variety of colors.

- Girls – Jeans with flared legs or bell-bottoms, accented with embroidery and studs, will be paired with long- or short-sleeved tees for a super-cool look.

- Boys – Hooded sweatshirts and hip logo tees will top off baggy jeans and wind pants in style. Goose-down jackets will also be popular – providing extra warmth and an edgy "street wear" look.

- Accessories – Look for boots with heavy lug soles, cool, unstructured hats and belts in a variety of shapes, colors and fabrics. In addition, classic and messenger-style book bags and soft-sided lunch boxes in great colors and designs will be popular additions to kids' outfits.

Extreme shyness: when the words just won't come out

(NAPSA) — Doctors are increasingly finding that extreme shyness in children may actually be a symptom of a treatable anxiety disorder known as selective mutism. Elisa Shipon-Blum, D.O., executive director and medical director for the Selective Mutism Group — Childhood Anxiety Network, answers some of the common questions about the condition.

What is selective mutism?

Selective mutism is a complex childhood anxiety disorder characterized by a child's inability to speak in select social settings, such as school. These children are able to talk normally in settings where they are comfortable, secure and relaxed. Although the etiology of selective mutism is varied, the majority of cases are due to severe anxiety, specifically social phobia.

Why does a child develop selective mutism?

The majority of children have a genetic predisposition to anxiety. Very often, these children show signs of severe anxiety, such as separation anxiety, frequent tantrums and crying, moodiness, inflexibility, sleep problems and extreme shyness from infancy on. Because most of these children have a persistent fear of performance or social interaction, they have developed "mutism" as a means of controlling their inner anxiety.

When are most children diagnosed as having selective mutism?

The average age of diagnosis is between 4 and 8 years old. These children were probably mute before school age, but just seemed "very shy." It is not until children enter school that selective mutism becomes blatantly obvious.

If a parent suspects his or her child has selective mutism, what should be done?

Speak to your physician and/or seek out a psychiatrist or psychologist who has experience with selective mutism. Read as much as you can about the disorder.

How is selective mutism treated?

The main goal with treatment is to lower anxiety while increasing self-esteem. A professional should devise an "individualized treatment plan" for each child, consisting of psychotherapy, medication, school involvement and other methodologies.

Follow these tips for making nutrition fun for kids

(NAPSA) — Keeping your kids healthy can include teaching them about good nutrition by introducing fun into their diets. When kids are home from school, parents can play a larger role in what types of foods their children will be eating throughout the day. One of the best ways to get kids interested in good nutrition is to make it fun.

Parenting expert Sissy Biggers suggests that getting kids involved in food preparation is one way to get them excited about eating well.

"Invite your kids to create their own dishes using three nutritious ingredients you provide," says Ms. Biggers. "Soon, they'll learn to make these healthy choices themselves."

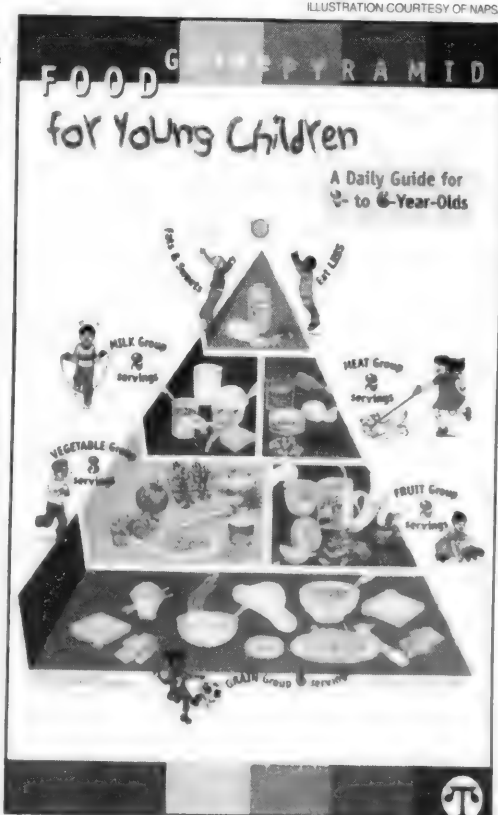

There's an abundance of fresh and vitamin-packed produce to choose from when planning your child's daily diet. Kids ages 2 to 6 need at least two servings of fruit and three servings of vegetables per day, according to the USDA food guide pyramid for young children.

Following are a few more tips to help make nutrition fun for your kids.

- Keep it simple: Good nutrition does not have to be difficult. Foods that kids love may already be convenient for you to serve. Fruit-flavored yogurts and string cheese help keep calcium fun-on-the-run.

- Dip it: Take advantage of the bounty of delicious fresh fruits and vegetables that are available by serving them as snacks to your kids whenever possible. If your child will not eat vegetables, try serving them with dips, such as ranch dressing or a mild salsa. Eating with their hands keeps nutrition fun for kids.

- Everybody outside: Regular exercise is an important part of a healthy lifestyle. Keep it fun by exercising together. Consider active, outdoor family outings, such as bicycling through the local park, hiking nearby trails or swimming at the beach or lake.

"It is important for kids to learn good eating habits now," says Ms. Biggers. "It is these early food experiences that will set healthy patterns for the rest of their lives."

Studies show the value of special education

(NAPSA) — Improved teaching methods have helped millions of American children with special needs reach new academic heights.

Studies show that a growing number of students with disabilities have joined their non-disabled peers and mastered grade level material. In addition, the number of students with disabilities who graduate high school and continue with a post-secondary education or move on to employment increases every year. Many say these achievements are largely due to special education.

"The work done by special educators and related service professionals is remarkable," says Nancy Safer, executive director of the Council for Exceptional Children. "Special education helps students succeed," she says — a notion supported by research.

The 20th Annual Report to Congress states that the number of students with disabilities who graduate high school has increased by more than 30 percent in the past 10 years. Additionally, a 1998 study concluded that "special education programs on average have a significantly beneficial effect on performance."

Many educators attribute the effectiveness of special education to the unique teaching styles the concept entails.

Effective strategies for teaching students with disabilities include intense, sustained instruction with a small student-to-teacher ratio, peer tutoring, direct instruction and specific skill instruction.

A recent George Mason

University study found that, among other things, children taught with such techniques improved in reading by a factor of four to one and in mathematics — including life skills, money and time management — by a significant factor as well.

According to Ms. Safer, however, the benefits of special education may not be limited to the classroom. Today, special education helps teach children the skills they need to live and work independently in society. For many of the millions of American children with disabilities, that's all the help they'll need.

Reading outside of school can be fun for children

(NU) — Did you know you are more likely to succeed when you read outside of school? That's why it's important for you to read during your free time.

Just as you would practice riding your skateboard or playing an instrument, it's important to practice reading every day. It's even more fun when you get creative. Try using the following tips from READ California to make reading part of your after-school activities.

- Start a book club: Ask several of your friends or family members to join a book club, where you can talk about the books you read and discuss things you liked and didn't like about the story.

- Perform a play based on a book you've read: Talk to your friends about dressing up in costumes and performing parts of the story before an audience. Use cardboard, construction paper and markers to create posters and invitations. Encourage friends and family to attend your performance. Ask a friend to film the event so that you can watch the movie later.

- Write a book review: Pretend you are a book critic. Write a one-paragraph review and rate the book by giving it one to five stars. Send your book review to friends and family, so they can read the books you've recommended. Consider submitting the review to your school newsletter or local paper.

- Create a game show: Write questions and quiz your friends on the story you have just read. Use cardboard or a blackboard to keep score.

- Write a sequel: Start the story where the author left off by writing a sequel to the book. Keep the original handy, so that you can include details about the main characters. For fun, add yourself as a character.

- Make a board game about the book: Use posterboard and markers to draw a board game. Borrow dice from another board game or create playing cards related to the story.

- Draw a picture book: If the story did not have illustrations, draw your own. Once you've come up with the pictures, read through the book and insert the pictures into the story.

Keep athletic uniforms in the game all year long

(NAPSA) – On your mark, get set, go ... to soccer, football, baseball and tee-ball games. Kids have more options than ever when it comes to sports. You love to watch them participate, but when the buzzer sounds, you're the only one left competing with mud, grass and perspiration on a soiled uniform.

"Children take pride in their team colors, so to keep their uniforms bright and bold, take the time to care for them properly," says Brett Oleson, senior consumer scientist with Maytag's Center for Home Solutions. "A game plan that includes pre-treating, proper water temperature and the right detergent will give you a running start against most stains."

Try the following helpful tips for stain removal from the Center for Home Solutions.

- Pre-treat stains with a special pre-treat product and pre-soak for 30 minutes in the hottest water safe for the fabric (check clothing label for suggested water temperature).

- Dampen perspiration stains with warm water and rub with a bar of pure soap. Then, wash in hot water with chlorine bleach if fabric permits.

- Rinse dirt stains in cool running water. Pre-treat ground-in dirt and wash in the hottest water the fabric will allow, with a detergent containing non-chlorine bleach.

- Soak grass stains in warm water with one scoop of powder or one capful of liquid laundry detergent that contains enzymes, then wash.

- Wash athletic wear in cold water (between 65 and 75 degrees).

- Dry athletic wear on a low temperature setting. A high temperature will cause shrinkage and permanent wrinkles.

- Air-dry all uniforms that have laminated numbers and let-

Wish lists make giving easy

(NAPSA) – Under President Bush, the Department of Education's budget was recently approved at $44.6 billion. The budget reflects an 11.5 percent increase in funds for our schools. While the budget increase is a start, schools and teachers still need to raise funds for school supplies for their classrooms this fall – from books and videos to art supplies and computer equipment.

Many teachers do not receive adequate funding to purchase even the most basic classroom supplies. In fact, according to a recent survey, of nearly 1,000 schools, 48 percent of teachers spend more than $100 of their own money on classroom supplies. The survey found that teachers need resource materials, such as books, videos and magazines, followed by classroom equipment such as computers, projectors and cameras. What may surprise many, however, is that almost a third of teachers spend their own money on the most basic classroom materials, such as staplers, tissues, pencils and erasers.

An increasingly popular solution to fill classroom needs is a school "wish list" distributed to school families. Wish lists let concerned families and friends get involved in providing much-needed teaching tools and classroom equipment. Of those surveyed, 22 percent of schools currently have some type of wish list, the primary reason being to supply fundamental materials for daily teaching.

This fall, there are fund-raising organizations for K-12 schools that are making it even easier for teachers to create wish lists and receive their requested items. Any participating school can create a wish list on certain school-related fund-raising Web sites. When friends and families visit the school's wish list, they can instantly – with the click of a button – purchase any wish list items and have them delivered directly to the school.

Currently, more than 20,000 schools raise money through these sites by encouraging their supporters to shop at more than 300 participating online, store and catalog merchants. Wish list purchases made through these sites not only benefit the teacher, but contribute dollars back to the school at no additional cost to the shopper or to the school.

During March 2001, U.S. consumers spent $3.5 billion online. If half of those purchases were made through school fund-raising sites, with an average rebate of 6 percent, approximately $105 million could have been given back to schools.

Creative Living looks to build home for retarded adults following fire

Creative Living, an organization that offers educational programs for mentally challenged adults, wants to build a home for them on the spot where its barn burned down, just a stone's throw from their existing white building on South Main Street.

By Rebecca Piro

Volunteers at Creative Living are hoping to turn a barn burning into a blessing.

Since the non-profit program was founded in 1985, Creative Living has offered day-and weekend-long programs in a renovated house on South Main Street, where mentally challenged adults learn how to be more independent. The potential housing units would offer an opportunity to take that education further, he says.

"It's very difficult to take a person who has lived with their parents all their life and say, 'Now you're going to be living on your own.' That is a difficult thing to accept for a person without disabilities," DiFiore says. "They will be able to interact with each other and help with each other, whether it is on a physical or mental level."

challenged son. "My son works, has a full-time job, and with some guidance is a very productive citizen," he says. "That's what (Creative Living) is trying to achieve."

Creative Living will likely partner with Lutheran Services, a charity program with members from the Faith Lutheran Church next door, to staff the housing units. The occupants would be monitored around the clock as they learned to function independently.

"It teaches an individual to have an idea of what it's like living on their own," says DiFiore.

Creative Living operates solely on private donations. Volunteers will likely seek grants and state funding as well as private donations to build the housing units, says DiFiore, adding that it's too early to estimate what the project's price tag will be. Creative Living has already submitted an application to the Housing and Urban Development department to seek federal funding for the project.

"It looks very good. I'm optimistic," says DiFiore. When and if the project receives approval from HUD, Creative Living will hire an architect. DiFiore hopes the project will begin the design phase by October.

Creative Living has already knocked down three other structures on its four acres of South Main Street property in anticipation of building the housing units.

"People should not be apprehensive about programs like this," says DiFiore. He is hopeful that the neighborhood will recognize the benefits that a Creative Living housing program would offer. "I think the average person would rather see a productive, self-sufficient individual than one dependent on... facilities run by the tax payer."

Roundup: Most varsity teams at Andover High to face competition the second week of September AHS sports teams prepare for fall campaign

By Rick Harrison

Andover High fall sports teams began tryouts and practices this week for the upcoming 2001 season.

The football team, expected to go away to pre-season camp in New Hampshire for the first time, started Monday while all other sports except golf (next week) were scheduled to start meetings, workouts, etc. today.

The first regular season competition for most teams will be the second week of September.

Following are brief outlines of the nine fall varsity teams, listing top graduates and some of last year's leading varsity players eligible to return this season.

FOOTBALL

Head coach Ken Maglio's Golden Warriors have several outstanding individual players eligible to return from a 2-7-1 team that hit its stride the second half of last season when it went 2-2-1 with one of the losses by two points (16-14) to perennial New Hampshire Division 2 power Exeter.

AHS started six underclassmen on defense and seven on offense in the Thanksgiving Day finale against Central Catholic.

Expected back are halfback-

/safety Bruce Brown, top scorer Chris Callison (32 points), quarterback Brendon Smith, linebackers Sean Smith and Jason Crabb, full-back Jason White and two-way linemen Alex Gostanian and Russell Stevens.

Top graduates included Jon Maloney, Andy Gallagher, Andy Yurko and Kyle Miller.

Season Opener: Sept. 14 at Foxboro (7 p.m.).

GIRLS SWIM & DIVE

The two-time defending North Sectional and Massachusetts state Division 1 champs will be seeking a third consecutive undefeated season and another Merrimack Valley Conference title.

Coach Marilyn Fitzgerald, who begins her 10th season with a 72-24 record in dual meets, is expected to welcome back another bumper crop of talented veterans.

Heading a long list of those eligible to return are multi-time state champions, record-holders and sisters Sally and Connie Brown. Connie is two-time MVC Division 1 Swimmer of the Year.

Other consistent winners from the past two years are Holly Boucher, Lauren Harlow, Caitlin Geary, Holly Hinds, Caitlin Hamer, Erica Douvadjian, Amy

The Golden Warriors get in a little practice Tuesday morning. AHS opens its season Friday, Sept. 14 at Foxboro.

Caron, Jackie Leahy and Liz Mancuso.

Among the top divers slated to return are gymnastics standouts Becky Hass and Kristen Elmsore.

Graduates who will be missed include former state diving champ Jen Busby, Jen Ambro, Hilary Schofield, Beth Couture and Lauren Kapelson.

Season Opener: Sept. 14 home versus Nashua, N.H. at Greater Lawrence Tech pool (3:30 p.m.).

GIRLS SOCCER

The Lady Warriors graduated only five players from a team that went 15-4-3 overall last fall, winning the Merrimack Valley Conference title for the 11th time in 16 years and reaching the Division 1 North Tournament semifinals before dropping a 1-0 triple-overtime decision to Newton North.

Among those eligible to return for Coach Dick Loschi's team are top scorer Katie Kramer, who had 23 goals and 12 assists last year, and midfielder Jenny Muller, who contributed 15 goals and nine assists.

Kramer has 40 goals and 22 assists over the past two seasons combined; and Muller, 25 goals and 11 assists.

Other top players expected back include Allison Dexter, Liz Sullivan, Courtney Hale, Lisa Tylus and goaltender Kaitlin Hyde.

Key graduates were Lisa Tisbert (21 goals, 11 assists last year), Diana Petersen, Jen Annese, Tina Baraby and goaltender Taylor Traub.

Season Opener: Sept. 6 at Haverhill, 3:30 p.m.

BOYS SOCCER

Coach Dave Amundsen's crew hopes to surpass last year's 9-9-2 record, which included a 4-1 Division 1 North Tournament win over MVC rival Billerica and a 3-1 second round loss to Beverly.

Prolific scorer Matt Bengston (nine goals, nine assists) is eligible to return, along with other top players Jon Konjoian, Ryan Piazza and Chris Brouillard.

Hard to replace will be graduates Paul Davison (13 goals, five assists), Josh Gagnon (12 goals, five assists), defenders Jim Hale and Geordie Miliotis and goalkeeper Dan Bellacqua (four shutouts).

Season Opener: Sept. 7 in Andover/North Andover Invitational Tournament.

FIELD HOCKEY

Fourth-year coach Maureen Noone has the AHS program headed in the right direction, and the locals are coming off a successful 10-7-2 season that included an appearance in the Division 1 North Tournament (1-0 loss to Westford Academy).

Grace Farnham, whose 14 goals (and four assists) last fall were the most by an AHS player in years, is eligible to return along with goaltender Angelica Rotsart (nine shutouts, seven solo).

Other top players expected back include Stephanie Casper, who had a team-high nine assists last year, Tristina Carlson, Kara Spang, Elysia Yet, Loren Munro, Joan Moffitt and Katie Seero.

Graduates who will be tough to replace include Conference Player-of-the-Year Abby Dennehy, Lindsay Shaheen and Leslie Adams.

Season Opener: Sept. 10 home versus Methuen (3:30 p.m.).

GOLF

The AHS linksmen were up to their old tricks last season, winning the Merrimack Valley Conference title with a 14-2 record (14-4 overall).

They also placed fourth in the Division 1 North Sectionals and tied for fifth at the All-State Championship.

Among those eligible to return from that balanced squad are Tim LeGrow, Dan Lentz, Andy Haak, J.J. Herling, Brian Alberico, Andy Ahern, Jason Edelstein and Derek Barenboim.

AHS ROUNDUP

■ GOLF

Coach Bob Lawson begins his 33rd year during which time 23 of his teams have qualified for the North Sectional Tournament.

His teams are 128-12-5 in their last 145 head-to-head matches and 152-17-6 in the last 175.

The MVC, which experimented briefly with stroke (medal) play several years ago, will return to that format this fall (instead of match play).

Season Opener: Sept. 5 at Methuen (3:30 p.m.).

CROSS COUNTRY

Both AHS teams are coming off winning records, the girls 9-1 last fall with the only loss to Chelmsford and the boys 5-4.

Expected back to lead the girls are Laura O'Connell, Julia Kwolyk, Lauren Woo, Kaitlin Stolberg, Bristol Konjoian, Kristina Araujo and Corey Hanson.

Graduates who will be hard to replace include Emily Pfeil, Caitlin Woo and Sheena Patel.

Among the eligible returners on the boys side are Phil Shaw, Andy Pfeil, Jason Durant, Matt Fabiani, Ryan Durkin and Tom Lane.

Gone is irreplaceable Tim Galebach, one of the premiere harriers in the state last fall and among the best ever at Andover High, and Brendan Ahern, who often finished 1-2 with Galebach to spark the dual-meet wins.

Season Opener: Sept. 13 home versus Lowell (3:30 p.m.).

GIRLS VOLLEYBALL

The Lady Warriors followed a 21-1 season in 1999 with an almost-as-good 20-3 campaign last fall.

Coach George Sullivan's team

then whitewashed Peabody and Lowell (both 3-0) in the Division 1 North Tournament before dropping a 3-1 decision to nemesis Chelmsford in the semifinals. Chelmsford handed AHS its only three losses last fall.

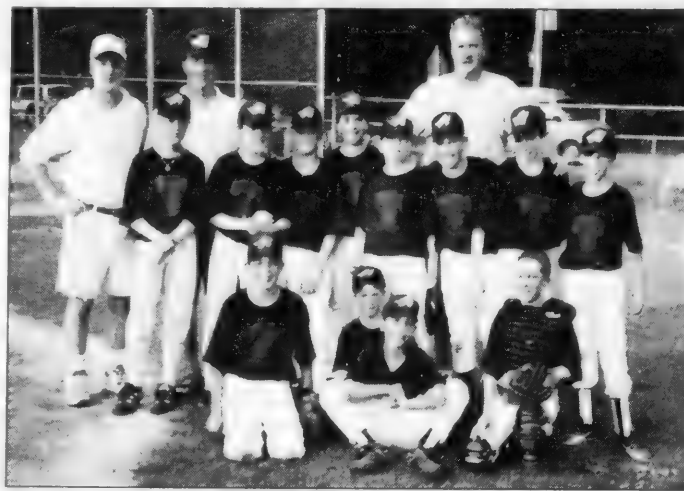

Eligible returnees include six-footers Julie Marvin, Shannon Sweeney and Megan Pinksten, along with Andrea Manners, Jackie Barry, Meagan Merinder, sisters Ashley and Kelly McLaughlin and Hilary Cohen.

Tough to replace will be Conference Player-of-the-Year Robin Young and Michelle Leahy.

Sullivan's teams have won a pair of MVC titles, qualified for the tournament 12 times and won close to 200 matches in the last 14 years.

Season Opener: Sept. 13 at Haverhill (6:30 p.m.).

Peter Orphanos, Piano Instruction

Peter Orphanos has been involved in the music field for more than 30 years. He specializes in teaching piano to beginning children and beginning adults who don't have much time to play, let alone practice. He says learning to play an instrument should be fun and at one's own learning pace. His emphasis is to teach in an easy-to-understand fashion with no pressure and completely stress-free.

He makes learning to play the piano easy and fun, focusing on classical, modern, blues, and jazz. Students can also learn to play many other types of music styles, including folk and rock & roll. He also teaches beginning and advanced students.

Mr. Orphanos' background includes studying at the New England Conservatory of Music, the Thayer Conservatory, School of Contemporary Music, and the Berklee College of Music. He has been invited to play with many well-known artists nationally and internationally.

Mr. Orphanos schedules one-half hour lessons at your convenience in the comfort of your home or in his studio. For more information call Mr. Orphanos' studio (978) 452-4251.
